FIRST OF SEASON'S ROAD SHOWS AT PAGE TONIGHT

"A maximum result with a minimum of effort" is Mr. Osterman's recipe for the successful farceur. And who is Mr. Osterman, pray? Well, he's a bit of a successful farceur himself. He plays an important part in "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," the New York farce bit which A. H. Woods will present at the Page tonight. His work in "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath" has elicited universal praise.

"Rarest of actors is the skilled farceur," says Mr. Osterman, "the man who without extravagant make-up or the use of the slip-stick can force a laugh from the laziest line or 'pat over' the most tedious of situations. When that kind of an artist shows his head above the horizon he has only to choose from the attractive number of contracts thrust upon him by impetuous managers."

Such a man is Mr. Osterman. He has little use for the slip-stick. A certain quality of wit and satire should mark a good farce, he maintains, and a greater consistency in the story than has been noticed in the average contemporary farce, which, he believes, is a detail in the direction of which the public taste is continually improving.

SPECIAL COURSE FOR WOMEN IN ORCHARD WORK

The attention of Medford women is called to a new course that the O. A. C. is starting in horticulture for women. While it is a one year course, they can enter whenever they see fit. It is a course to aid women in orchard work, to either help them in running their own tracts or to become orchard foremen. The course will consist of some lectures but will be primarily orchard and laboratory work, which will include picking and packing, pruning and spraying, in fact all orchard practices. Three half days each will be spent in the field so that one will have an abundant opportunity to obtain good thorough training.

In addition to this course in horticulture, there will also be courses offered in daily manufacture, general agriculture, etc. These are all one year courses. While people cannot come for a college year, perhaps they could come for three or six months, and with the tremendous shortage of labor, it will offer a fine opportunity for women to become proficient in orchard work. The women will have a chance to do actual pruning themselves and the same is true of all orchard operations.

Man's Limitation

Stand back now, God, get out of the way. The world belongs to the people today. The sun must rise and set at their will. The mountains they level, the valleys they fill: From earth's awful depths the oil they squeeze, To spin over land or fly over seas; From rivers' deep flood earth's thirst they now slake, Nor thought of Thee, Lord, in their pride do they take. They harness the lightning, their will to obey, And are forcing it now thy creatures to slay; Like swordfish or shark 'neath the billows they roam, Tho many brave lads thence never see home.

But there's one secret, Lord, eluding their grasp, The secret of Life, for when it is past There's none can recall or kindle anew.

Life's snuffed-out spark, Lord, it's just up to you, MRS. JOHN W. SHORT
