President's Appeal to People

My Fellow Countrymen: The congressional elections are at hand. They occur in the most critical period our country has ever faced, or is likely to face in our time. If you have approved of my leadership and wish to continue me to be your unembarrassed spokesman in affairs at home and abroad, I earnestly beg that you will express yourselves unmistakably to that effect by returning a democratic majority to both the senate and the house of representatives.

I am your servant and will accept your judgment without cavil, but my power to administer the great trust assigned me by the constitution would be seriously impaired should your judgment be adverse, and I must frankly tell you so because so many critical issues depend upon your verdict. No scruple of taste must, in grim times like these, be allowed to stand in the way of speaking the plain truth.

I have no thought of suggesting that any political party is paramount in matters of patriotism. I feel too keenly the sacrifices which have been made in this war by all our citizens, irrespective of party affiliation, to harbor such an idea. I mean only the difficulties and delicacies of our present task are of a sort that make it imperatively necessary that the nation should give its undivided support to the government under a unified leadership, and that a republican congress would divide the leadership.

The leaders of the minority in the present congress have unquestionably been pro-war, but they have been anti-administration. At almost every turn since we entered the war they have sought to take the choice of policy and the conduct of the war out of my hands and put it under the control of instrumentalities of their own choosing. This is no time either for divided counsel or for divided leadership. Unity of command is as necessary now in civil actions as it is upon the field of battle. If control of the house and senate should be taken away from the party now in power, an opposing majority could assume control of legislation and oblige all action to be taken amid confusion and distraction.

The return of a republican majority to either house of congress would moreover, certainly be interpreted on the other side of the water as a repudiation of my leadership. Spokesmen of the republican party are urging you to elect a republican congress, in order to back up and support the president; but, even if they should in this way impose upon some credulous voters on this side of the water, they would impose on no one on the other side. It is well understood there, as well as here, that the republican leaders desire not so much to support the president as to control him. The people of the allied countries with whom we are associated against Germany are quite familiar with the significance of elections. They would find it very difficult to believe that the voters of the United States had chosen to support their president by electing to the congress a majority controlled by those who are not in fact in sympathy with the attitude and action of the administration.

I need not tell you, my fellow countrymen, that I am selling your support, not for my own sake, or for the sake of a political party, but for the sake of the nation itself, in order that its lawful unity of purpose may be evident to all the world. In ordinary times I would not feel at liberty to make such an appeal to you. In ordinary times divided counsels can be endured without permanent harm to the country.

But these are not ordinary times. If in these critical days it is your wish to sustain me with undivided support, I beg that you will say so in a way which it will not be possible to misunderstand either here at home or among our associates on the other side of the sea. I submit my difficulties and my hopes to you.

WOODROW WILSON.

ITALY HURLS ALL HER ARMIES UPON DEFEATED ENEMIES

guarding the Trentino along the front from the west of Lake Garda to the Piave also is becoming serious. Between the Brenta and the Piave the fifteen Austrian divisions operating there have been cut off by the capture of Vallon Pass. Elsewhere on this front the Austrians must retreat northward thru the Alps with the Italians, British and French pressing hard at their heels. If, as reported, the Italians are attacking from Rivisoldo southward to Lake Garda, as well as eastward from the lake, the allies have begun the familiar pincer movement in the Trentino.

Austrian troops also are retreating from Serbia and the left wing already has crossed the Danube. Vienna anticipates the Serbs have reached the Alpine near Znojmo and the fall of Belgrade and the complete liberation of Serbia would seem but a matter of a few days, if not hours.
