HYMNS OF HATE FAVORITE POEMS OF HUN AUTHORS

LONDON, Oct. 23.—(Correspondent of Associated Press.) Fragments obtained of the latest output of German songs and poems of the war are shot thru and laid, as were their forerunners, with hate.

"Now burn, O hate, flame forth! For we have loved too long. Hate is no sin, or if it is God pardon us the wrong."

This is the beginning of the piece of verse whose kinship to the notorious "Hymn of Hate" is evident. Then follows a catalog of the allies' sins the foremost of which is "conspiring with yellow Asiatics." The final outburst runs:

"So burn, O hate, flame forth! Burn even in Death's house. If ever hate should prove a sin, Sin be God's law to us."

The writer signs himself "Michael", but one Bernhard Konig who styles himself "King Bear-heart," outdoes him. He indites a long poem telling Germany that when her "Virgin Sword" had struck down her base and covetous detractors, she would be called on to execute Justice, without abatement or mercy. Thus:

"Then hurl at him your scorn, the hateful hypocrite, the master liar; hurl it in his face that ains with pride. Drive him out—there is no room for half measures—drive out the scum of cowardly assassins, of Wallen negroes! Away with them! The face of Europe cannot endure such a disfigurement. A kick for this rabble which, a prey to folly, has presumed to cross swords with Germany."

There are nine stanzas of that. Not very different is the voice of one P. T. Steicher, who grows lyrical with hatred of "the savage border," the enemy, who are characterized as "tigers, hyenas, the off-scourings of humanity, the shame of Europe."

There is another poem by one Zeiger who hymns Force as the cleanser and inspirer of the world. "Peace," he cries, "is but war that keeps silent."

"Each sword-blow," W. Flex sings, "is a Holy Mass, each rifle shot a Prayer."

"O Lord," intones another, "we worship thy might, we worship Thee in shining armor; and the horrible work once accomplished and Peace come again, albeit with wings bespattered with blood, then let thy lark sing for pliancy: The High-Mass of Germany is ended."

SLEEPING CAR RATES REDUCED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Elimination of the one-half cent a mile extra railroad fare for Pullman transportation effective December 1, has been decided on by Director General McAdoo.

The order to be issued soon, also will remove other differentials imposed by the passenger rate order last June on tourist sleepers and other special accommodations. It will not affect any of the charges imposed by the Pullman company.

This will mean a loss to the railroads of between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000 it is estimated. No radical changes will be made soon in passenger train schedules or services, it was said today at the railroad administration. A few extra trains will be added to accommodate mid-winter tourist traffic to California and Florida.

WHITE THANKSGIVING SEEMS ASSURED

A white Thanksgiving seems assured Medford this year—the first since 1910. Snow began falling at noon Tuesday, and the beautiful continued to blanket the earth all afternoon. It is the first snowfall of the season and followed one of the most gorgeous sunrises of the year, one that seemed to promise a perfect autumn day. The sun, however, after a brief glimpse of the valley, changed its mind and hid behind the rapidly gathering clouds that have brought the first touch of winter. Weather predictions are for warmer weather and rain—the weather man seldom strikes it right in his long distance prophesies.

709 BOMBING RAIDS MADE BY BRITISH

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Statistics show the British air forces during the 13 months preceding the armistice made 709 bombing raids over German territory.

There were 374 raids on 52 large German towns; 209 on German air-bases, established for the defense of the Rhine, and 126 on other military objectives.

In all 737 tons of bombs were dropped.
