

TURIN CONFERS CITY'S FREEDOM UPON WILSON

President Takes Honor as Tribute to Americans Whom He Represents—Reluctance to Participate in War Earlier Due to Tradition—Entrance Due Conviction Freedom at Stake.

TURIN, Jan. 6.—In accepting the freedom of the city of Turin at a meeting in the municipal building today, President Wilson said:

"Mr. Mayor: Both on the streets of this interesting city and here you have made me feel at home. I feel about as if I were the greeting of a people of whom I was indeed a fellow citizen. I am very much honored that this great city, playing no important role in the life and in the industrial endeavor of Italy, should have conferred this distinction upon me, and I take the liberty of interpreting your action, sir, not merely as a personal compliment to myself, to whom you ascribe virtues and powers which I feel I do not possess but as a tribute to the people whom I represent.

"The people of the United States were reluctant to take part in the war, not because they doubted the justice of the cause, but because it was the tradition of the American people to play no part in the politics of any continent, but as the struggle grew from stage to stage they were more and more moved by the conviction that it was not an European struggle, but it was a struggle of the freedom of the world and the liberation of humanity and with that conviction, it was impossible that they should withhold their hands.

"Their hearts have been with you from the start and then when the time of their conviction came they threw every resource of men and women and enthusiasm into the struggle. It has been a happy circumstance that America should thus be associated with Italy. Our ties had been many and intimate before the war, and now they constitute a pledge of friendship and of a permanent association of purpose which must delight both peoples.

"May I not, therefore, again thank you for the honor you have conferred upon me and take the privilege of greeting you affectionately as my fellow citizens."

"Fellow Citizens" President Wilson's address on the balcony of the municipal building at Turin today was as follows: "My friends of Turin: I now have the privilege of addressing you as my fellow citizens. It is impossible at this distance that my voice should reach all of you, but I want you to know that I bring the greetings and the affectionate greetings of the United States to the people of Italy and the great city of Turin. My sentiments, coming from the heart, is the sentiment of our people. Viva Italia!"

The following may be of interest to those waiting to be notified of their acceptance for overseas duty in Red Cross service, or to those whose friends or relatives were stationed at some port of sailing in the eye of their departure for overseas work.

Immediately the armistice terms were signed, the commission of the American Red Cross in Europe called that all plans for sending personnel to Europe should be cancelled, with the exception of certain specific cases.

Several hundred persons who had already obtained their passports had been authorized to proceed to Europe, but before they could sail further advice came from the Red Cross commission in Europe to cancel all plans for additional personnel.

The sending of further personnel was made unnecessary by the fact that following the signing of the armistice so many people in Europe, whose activities had previously been closely associated with the prosecution of hostilities, were released for other services.

This situation has resulted in a considerable number of people reaching the ports of embarkation after having made all their plans for European service. Many who had planned to go had said good-bye to their friends, and naturally were embarrassed when their sailings were cancelled.

The officers of the Red Cross have been greatly distressed at the necessity of disappointing so many who had, with fine spirit and loyalty, made plans and sacrifices, to go to Europe in Red Cross service. It is felt, however, that full understanding of the circumstances will make everyone appreciate the wisdom of sending abroad anyone whose services are not needed. This is especially true because of the extreme difficulty of arranging for return passage for those who go from now on. To send additional personnel under such conditions would be fair neither to them nor to the Red Cross.

The Red Cross has argued that every such person receives practical acknowledgment of their service and a statement as to why it could not be available, and it is hoped that this public statement will make clear why the change had to be made.

EAGLE POINT EAGLETS

The P. & E. out of business. Why, it made me feel like to think of what a calamity it might bring onto, not only this community, but into Falls as well, and then all that vast tract of timber to be left until the Oregon Trunk Line railroad could be extended to Battle Falls to carry all of that lumber to market, but I guess that the P. & E. will run the rest of the winter at any rate, as it came in on time the next trip and the company is planning to do quite a lot of logging and hauling this season yet.

H. R. Cleveland who is living on the Homestead place near Brownshoro, came in Thursday noon with a load of haled hay, taking it to the ranch. He stopped at the Sunnyside for dinner on his way home.

G. A. Finson of Brownshoro was doing business here Thursday. Sam Vestal and his son, Sergeant James Vestal, were here for dinner Thursday, and James went on to Medford to take the train for Portland to accept a business position there. Chris Beale was also among the guests at the Sunnyside Thursday noon.

The question of enforcing the stock law in our little city is assuming great proportions. The city days have ordered the old pound torn down and rebuilt, taking it away from the Farmers' hotel barn and putting it between the great mill and the mill warehouse, then stock taken up on a shed to protect the stock from the storms and feed will be kept to supply all needs, and our miller, George Brandon, will act as poundmaster, and marshal and war be to the animal that ventures inside the corporate limits of our city.

Jerry Lewis, the young man I spoke of in the latter part of the summer as being here on a furlough and getting his ankle broke, is on our streets again. He has obtained his discharge from the army and went to Jacksonville to visit his sister, Mrs. Cecily Flerey, wife of county clerk elect, and while there was taken with the flu and confined to his bed several days.

Dave Fencer and Mr. Adamson of Trail were doing business here Friday and so was Walter Allen, son of one of the prominent stockmen of Derby. He was out cow hunting.

William Perry, one of our prominent business men and farmers, and wife were among us Friday; also C. L. Beltz, Benjamin Brnshy, Antioch stockman, Mr. Egensbury, Nick and Peter Young, Miss Sarah Singleton also were doing business with our merchants.

Fred Pelouse, one of our prosperous farmers and dairymen, was here Friday.

Miss Ella Belford was among the guests at the Sunnyside Friday.

A man by the name of Welch came in Friday evening and spent the night. He is engaged in hauling lumber from the P. & E. depot for the Rogue River Canal company, to repair the flume across Lake creek.

Mrs. Vivian Jones of this city, who has been on the sick list for some time in a hospital in Medford, came home Saturday on the P. & E. Corbit Smith, a discharged soldier, was on the train on his way home three miles west of Battle Falls. There was quite a number of passengers on the train, but about all strangers to me.

Fred Stanley has been busy riding after his stock, and F. J. Avers and wife and stopping on the farm with Mrs. Stanley, doing the work.
