CATTLE PUNCHERS SENT ALASKA TO HERD MUSK OX

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 30.—"Cattle punchers" from the American plains are to be sent to the tundra country of the white Alaskan Arctic to herd musk oxen toward western Alaska where they will be domesticated and butchered to increase the meat supply...

Some of the oxen will come from the snow covered islands fringing the continent's northern rim, the dispatch said. Governor Thomas Riggins, Jr., of Alaska, has been quoted as saying there are 200,000 musk oxen on Melville Island alone.

The federal department of the interior and the department of agriculture, the dispatch said, are arranging to send the cow men north. Congress will be asked to make an appropriation to outfit the expedition.

Governor Riggins and Jafet Lindenberg, a Nome, Alaska, mining man who also owns reindeer herds, are supporting the plan, it was said. Vilhjalmur Stefansson, Arctic explorer, on his recent return from the north said the musk oxen numbered thousands and contended they could be herded and domesticated and butchered. He said the meat from the musk ox is better than most beef sold in the states.

If the oxen are herded to western Alaska they will not be going into a new country for, according to records left by early explorers, many herds of oxen roamed the Seward Peninsula and the country between the Yukon and Kuskokwin rivers over a half century ago. When whalers went north and gave gifts to the Eskimos, it is said, the great herds were wiped out. Only the far northern herds remained.

Reindeer were imported into western Alaska from Siberia by the federal government. Eskimos were placed in charge of the herds. Today the reindeer have thrived and the care of them forms one of the principal Eskimo industries.
