FORT WORTH, Tex., May 3.—A hundred and six men were killed at the three big government aviation fields here between Nov. 15, 1917, and the recent close of aerial activities, according to official figures just made public.

In the same period, the three fields now being closed turned out 1,375 finished aviators, most of whom were sent to the western front. A thousand commissioned aviators were also sent here from other schools to finish their gunnery course at Tullahoma field.

The statistics made public show that during the training period the training period the actual flying hours at Carruthers field totaled 35,000; at Barron field, 20,698, and at Tullahoma field, 32,488.

The tail spin and nose dive were responsible for a large majority of the accidents, according to officers. In the entire training period not a single American cadet was killed on the first solo flight. This is attributed to the thorough instruction in ground work. Three British fliers were killed on solo flights.

While the tail spin and nose dive were chief factors in the fatality list, there were many other contributory causes. Captain Vernon Castle, the American dance interpreter, who had faced death numerous times over the German lines as a British aviator, swerved his machine sharply to avoid hitting another aviator here, he lacked height for the maneuver, crashed and was killed.

The young son of General Peyton C. March, chief of staff, was killed at the gunnery field while engaged in combat practice at a height of 2,000 feet. The wings of his machine became entangled with those of his opponent's plane.

Captain Robert Isett, of Providence, post adjutant at Barron field, fell from the greatest height, 5,000 feet. Two men fell from their planes at great heights because of failure to strap themselves in.
