

ASHLAND BUYS LAND TO AID IN HIGHWAY WORK

ASHLAND, May 19.—(Special.)—The city has purchased from the Spindler heirs an acre of the Goble estate, needed by virtue of highway development on Walker avenue, and is in the market wanting a purchaser for a steam roller which the municipality invested in some years ago when paving, instead of knighthood, was in flower. This equipment is in good order and various parties have been inspecting it with a view of purchasing.

Several members of the Masonic fraternity went to Dunsmuir on Saturday last to attend a lodge meeting at which the officers of the grand lodge of California were present. No. 13 was so late on that date that the visitors made the trip by automobile.

The annual meeting of the Southern Oregon conference of the Free Methodist church closed on Sunday evening. Bishop Pierce, of California, president, and a series of evangelistic services were a chief element of the conference session, both afternoon and evening, during the period May 11-18 inclusive.

Leith Abbott, local student of the University of Oregon, taking a course in journalism, has been elected editor of the Emerald, the university publication. Leith's start as a newspaper man was as reporter on the Tidings in this city.

Jack Kimball, of Klamath Falls, representative of the Weverhauser timber interests, made a brief call here the last of the week, incident to an auto tour of Southern Oregon and northern California, accompanied by his wife, who was formerly Miss Lyle Watson of this city. At Chico, they mention having met Thomas Auld, a former business man of Ashland, whose realty office was purchased by Mr. Yockey.

A phenomenon was observed on High street Sunday morning, the milky way being easily discernible until after the noon hour, unsettling all astronomical theories as to eclipses, solar and lunar cycles. Instead of the cow lumines over the moon, Morton's auto dairy ran amuck in that locality. Technically, a neighboring barn was in apogee, the motive power being in perihelion, and as a result the transit was impeded. The hour of total "separation" is supposed to have occurred about 9 o'clock Saturday night.

Phil Volcott returned home on furlough a little sooner than expected. He is the only one of the family clan who went overseas, and has some thrilling experiences to relate, as he was right near the vortex of active operations where the carnage was something fearful. Phil, however, escaped without a scratch, and as an indication that he is willing to continue in the service, has re-enlisted as a member of the 15th infantry.

Fred Schuerman, still over in France, remains in the vicinity of Aleney, and in a recent letter to the home folks mentions the circumstance of a visit from Secretary of War Baker and Gen. Pershing to that locality. He further states that rumors are afloat involving his return either on, or before or after September 1. Fred has been serving an indeterminate clerical appointment at army headquarters, overwhelmed in a maze of accounts pertaining to army subsistence, also transportation and equipment schedules.

Alfred Reaver was recently victoriously represented in the auto section of the Portland Journal, demonstrating the merits of electrical control as applied to Premier cars. He has for assistants in the big corporation with which he is connected, his brother Meredith, also Cecil Norton, both of this vicinity, and returned soldier boys from overseas.

Mrs. Wing has moved from rooms in the congested traffic quarters on East Main street, to the De Witt apartments on Allison street, where the environment is one of the peaceful, the quiet and undisturbed.

Page and Son, a family firm, plan to reopen their warehouse and packing plant in the local railroad yards this season, an institution which has been a busy center along these lines in past years.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Dodge are visiting in Portland, and Mrs. A. F. Hunt of that metropolis, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Will Dodge in this city.

An extended eastern trip is in prospect for the family of G. H. Hedberg, the entire membership of which have left for New York state to visit relatives, their absence from home to be prolonged a month or six weeks.

The city council is wrestling with an ordinance, the provisions of which require licenses for all public dances which are given for personal gain. Furthermore, a chamber-one must be in attendance at all these dances, and children under 18 must be accompanied by either parent or guardian.

Archie Strickland, now with the Pacific Headgear and Light company, with headquarters at Pasco, Wash., has eight towns under his supervision, and also has the water as well as the electric light system in two of the larger places to look after, the specific district under his control having 3000 customers. With added responsibilities more compensation is in order, and his salary is not fixed at a handsome figure, way above anything on the municipal schedule. Here he was formerly employed. Although Pasco is the distributing light and power center with which he is connected, his home is at Kennewick, Box 116.

W. O. Dickerson, of the paint store, who has been living on Allison street, has moved to the Jarvis property on Wimer street.

In view of the approaching Decoration day, the local cemeteries are being gotten in order for the annual memorial observance.

At a convention of the Oregon State Sunday School association, held at Corvallis, May 16-18, Rev. J. W. Hoyt, of this city, Sunday school missionary, demonstrated specific blackboard appliances for the benefit of instruction on the part of teachers. Mr. Hoyt was appointed a member of the committee on constitution, as was also O. P. Carson, another local resident.

As heretofore prophesied, the address of Daniel A. Poling, LL. D., at the Chautauqua auditorium on Saturday evening, May 17, proved to be the climax of loyal utterance and patriotic devotion, spoken by a man who has associated with the soldier boys, not only in camp, but in the trenches. Moreover, every agency in behalf of the allied forces in general was extolled, Jew or gentile, Catholic or Protestant on the one hand, or Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., and Salvation Army on the other, while Christian Endeavorers wielded a potential influence by rising to any emergency. The speaker also expressed gratification regarding the attitude of the peace conference relating to prohibition on an international basis. Preliminary to the address, Dr. Poling was the guest of honor at a dinner held in the Presbyterian church, the local Endeavorers acting as hosts and dispensing a hospitality enjoyed by guests, membership and invited friends.

HAWKER LANDS IN SEA

(Continued from page one.) morning. This was assuming that the flyers would maintain a speed averaging 100 miles an hour. Hawker expected to average 106 miles an hour. The little Sopwith biplane carried sufficient fuel for a 24-hour flight under ordinary conditions and enough for 26 hours if weather favored it.

Hawker's machine carried a wireless transmitter capable of a 250-mile radius.

Capt. Raynham Injured Captain Frederick P. Raynham, whose attempt to join Hawker in his dash met with accident, inquired frequently for news of his rival and expressed the hope that Hawker and Grievie would attain their objective.

The pilot of the Martinsyde machine and his navigator, Captain C. W. F. Moran, sustained painful injuries when their plane was wrecked yesterday in attempting to take the air. Captain Raynham was able to drive his automobile from his hangar but Captain Moran was more seriously injured, his face bearing three deep cuts which required several stitches to close.

Admiral Kerr Next A successful flight by Hawker will not mark the last of the trans-Atlantic attempts to be made from this port. Vice Admiral Mark Kerr, before returning last night to Harbor Grace where the giant Handley-Page planes are being assembled, said that his expedition would make the trip in the interests of science if denied the chance to be the first.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., May 19.—The intrepid youths who drove their planes out over the eastern horizon today in an attempt to win for England and for themselves the glory of the first trans-Atlantic air flight left the ground with doubtful chances of survival should their venture meet with mishap in mid-ocean.

Harry G. Hawker and Lieutenant Commander Mackenzie Grievie, his skipper, who were encased in full length, non-sinkable suits, had a further degree of assurance in an ingeniously built boat, shaped so as to form the rear hood of their fuselage and proved by experiment to possess considerable seaworthiness and outfit with provision and signalling devices.

Unlike the huge craft with which American naval crews hope to fly to Europe, the planes which soared over the Atlantic today were they have no pontoons to keep them afloat, nor permit towing in case of accident. They are small biplanes of the scout type, Hawker's Sopwith having a wing spread of 46 feet, with a length over all of 31 feet, while Raynham's Martinsyde, resembling a bumble bee in flight, measures only 41 feet across the wings, with a fuselage 26 feet long. Both carry a single motor, the Sopwith is rated at 350 horsepower and the Martinsyde at 275.

Hawker's craft, rated at 100 miles an hour, was expected to attain 106 miles with its undercarriage abandoned by an automatic releasing arrangement, while Raynham asserted his belief that his engine, capable of 124 miles with a normal load, would do 110 at least, with the extra cargo of fuel required for the ocean flight.

For communication with ships at sea, both machines carry wireless of limited range, the Sopwith having both sending and receiving apparatus while the Martinsyde has only the latter, which will serve to pick up information as to position and weather conditions from passing ships.

The aviators, contenders for the London Daily Mail's $50,000 prize for the first trans-Atlantic flight completed in 72 hours, announced before the start their intention to land at Brooklands airfield, near London. Hawker's navigator expected to fly eastward about 600 miles and turn into the trans-Atlantic shipping lane.

Both navigators declared they would depend upon their sextants and compasses for bearings, together with specially drawn tables for calculations. Heading east thru the night, they expected to meet the sun on its westward way at a time to give them a good horizon and opportunity for figuring out their position. During the night, they said, they would "shoot the stars" and from their observations calculate position, while the sun would be their guide by way. Both pilots expected to fly at an average altitude of 8000 feet, tho the atmosphere conditions would vary this plan.

Start of the attempt to cross the Atlantic thru the air found the people of St. John's wishing the aviators God-speed, but shaking their heads in doubt. All the assurances of flying sons, returned from the fighting fronts, could not assure them that the men essaying the great adventure were not flying into the face of elements which would drive them down to watery graves. The unknown fate of Andre, who disappeared in the Far North years ago in an attempt to make a balloon passage over the Pole was coupled with the failure of Major Wood in the Short's machine in the Irish sea recently as indicating the probable result of the attempt for the honor of the pioneer crossing.

Of the flyers, three are British, one Australian by birth. Hawker, the Australian, is 27 years old and a mechanic who rose to the rank of flyer under the tutelage of Sopwith, one of the earliest of the British aviators. In 1912 Hawker made an endurance record with a plane patterned after that of the American Wright Brothers and later attained what was claimed to be a world altitude record—28,500 feet. During the war he was engaged as an experimental flyer assisting in the development of Sopwith machines.
