DARING ROBBERY BUSINESS SECTION OF LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Mar. 8.—Four men robbed the safe of the Fifth Street Store here last night, securing from $25,000 to $30,000 cash and Liberty bonds, the exact value of the latter not having yet been checked.

The men gained entrance to the store by rapping for a watchman and telling him they were detectives from an agency which he knew was employed to watch the store. One inside, they bound and gagged the watchman. Then they overpowered a night janitor, blew the safe and walked out. The robbery was not discovered for five hours.

The watchman and janitor were found handcuffed to the iron grille work on the elevator shaft when the store was finally entered.

The watchman told the police that the robbers worked three hours on the big old-fashioned safe and in the meanwhile forced him to "ring in" his usual signals.

He said they then handcuffed him where he was found and left in an automobile that had been running outside all the time they worked.

When the signals failed to come in, a man was sent by the telegraph company to raise the watchman. He notified the Merchants Patrol which forced an entrance to the store and released the men. Search of the store disclosed that a sack containing about 75 pounds of pennies had been taken with the other contents of the safe, but left on the main floor. The police believed the men abandoned it because they feared it would attract attention when they carried it to the automobile.
