The Roving Marines have made themselves very popular with the people of Medford during their stay here Thursday and today both by their soldierly appearance and actions, entertaining veraciously and gentlemanly demeanor while mixing with the public generally. Their visit promises to be productive in gaining recruits as one young Medford man has already enlisted as a musician in the marine band, and a number of parents and prospective recruits have made pointed inquiries. The marines gave another short parade this afternoon, marching to the high school where the band played a number of selections for the student body. They leave at 7 o'clock tonight for Eugene.

The sensational trial of Lark Evans on the charge of kidnaping and robbing W. O. White of Grants Pass last September was begun in circuit court at Jacksonville today with the court room crowded with spectators. The entire forenoon was spent in selecting the jury and the taking of testimony began early this afternoon. Evans is defended by Gus Newbury, and his father from La Grande, Ore., and wife are seated at his side during the trial. There are 20 witnesses in the case including a number from Grants Pass and Klamath Falls. Sheriff Lewis of Josephine county and Sheriff Humphreys of Klamath county are among the witnesses. The case will probably be on trial several days. District Attorney George M. Roberts represents the state.

Many Medford women witnessed their first boxing contests at the Page theatre last night in the two fights that were given as a part of the Roving Marines entertainment. These women enjoyed the bouts and changed their opinion entirely about the "brutality of prize fighting. The bouts went not only fast and clever but were attended with some hard blows exchanged. "Why that was fun," said one old gray haired woman who "had seen boxing for the first time. "The boys didn't hurt each other at all with those pillows they wore on their hands. I always thought such affairs were cruel."
