pointed a headquarters committee to investigate and report to the budget committee of the board of directors as to what is necessary for office equipment and for the improvement of the quarters.

It was decided to appoint a committee to have charge of entertainment of the participants of the North west Advertising Clubs caravan while in Medford enroute to Stockton, Calif. They will be in Medford on May 20th.

A cancellation die was ordered from the government for the Medford post office which will stamp all letters "Crater Lake National Park, Oregon."

A number of problems were called to the attention of the board and an account of their importance it was decided that the same be given consideration when the proper amount of time could be devoted to the study of them.

Due to the press of private business, Mr. Wm. G. Tait found it impossible to serve as a member of the board of directors and offered his resignation, which was accepted and in his place Mrs. Rose G. Schieffelin was elected as the board member.

ENGLISH CAPTAIN ATTRACTED HERE BY TROUT FISHING

The fame of the Rogue river as a fishing stream is even attracting the attention of tourists from London, England and that is the reason why Captain and Mrs. Romilly Feddin and son Robin Feddin arrived here yesterday from southern California.

The captain, who served five years in the war with the British army and who is an artist, writer and sportsman, is touring this country with his wife and son, and ten days ago having learned in some way that William F. Isaacs was a piscatorial expert began corresponding with the Medford merchant about coming here to enjoy fishing in the Rogue. Mr. Isaacs wrote him not to come at this time because fishing conditions were bad due to the high water, but the captain and family arrived in the city last evening and had no sooner located at the Hotel Medford, than he set out to find Toggery Bill to see if the fishing situation had changed any.

This forenoon the London visitors left for several days sojourn at the Rogue Elk resort at Trail, during which the captain will try his luck in the river. On their return he and Mr. Isaacs will fish at various points in the river.

Mr. Isaacs says he is corresponding with a number of men in southern California and other sections who desire to come here for the fishing.

successful in attaining the objects we sought and the lines 'By Associated Press' has become a hall mark of accuracy, whether the event recorded is the election of a president, the signing of an armistice, a decision of the supreme court or the death of the pope."

"While at all times this open season continues, every four years comes a special period of tribulation. When the presidential campaign rolls around, every candidate for the nomination and the resulting presidential candidates and every manager of every such candidate finds clear evidence in our report of bias against every candidate mentioned—until after the election and then all agree that the Associated Press has been conspicuously fair. This has been our experience in the past and there is every indication that the present campaign will be no exception.

For No Candidate
"I say this for there is a measure of truth in the charge, for on the theory that 'he who is not for us is against us,' the Associated Press is against every candidate for it surety is not for any one of them."

Mr. Noves explained that while every one of the candidates will have the support of individual members, the Associated Press will continue serenely indifferent as to the outcome of the nominating conventions and elections, contenting itself to supplying its members with the news as it happens, playing no favorites and punishing no enemies.

"The report of the Associated Press does not grow or simply come into being without effort," continued Mr. Noves. "Every line, every word is the product of an individual worker of whom hundreds toil and adventure daily to supply a fair picture of the world's happenings, every one of you know that at bottom these charges of bias are charges against our anonymous workers—who if we are betrayed, are the betrayers, who, if these charges are true, are responsible to the trust we have placed in them."

"You know them, you know them all, division chiefs, bureau chiefs, editors, correspondents, reporters, operators, working tirelessly, faithfully, efficiently, intelligently. You know that these men are the salt of the earth, the pride of our profession and neither your opinion nor mine can be fitly expressed, on an occasion of this sort, of the ignorances, the blatherskites or the liars who defame them."

Marshall Is Speaker

Mr. Noves, in introducing Vice-President Marshall, the principal speaker at the luncheon, said: "Some men shrink in stature on further acquaintance, and some will grow. The people of the United States have observed one of the chief of their servants from day to day and from year to year not only of his delightful personality and of his great tact in a very trying and difficult position, but of his resolute cheerfulness and sturdy good sense—and that is saying a great deal in these days and especially of a man who has been in his precise geographical position."

"It gives me great pleasure to present to you the vice-president of the United States, Thomas R. Marshall."
