Let's Go, IOWA IOWA FIGHTS (Slogan just received from Iowa University Alumnus for State of Oregon)

We can not send our sons and daughters Iowa Alumnus and Iowa Men and Women in Oregon

For two reasons: Either it is too far or Iowa institutions are crowded; so let's VOTE YES NO. 310, Primary May 21st, Higher Educational Tax Act, so that our sons and daughters may have an opportunity to attend Oregon State University and Agricultural College, and State Normal School.

Also do not forget to Vote 312 Yes—Soldiers' Sailors' and Marines' Educational Aid.

Also 302 Yes and County Road Bonds for Permanent Highways.

VOTE FOR HOOVER'S PRINCIPLES.

WITH Hoover withdrawn from the Oregon primaries the contest on Friday is, of course, a contest between Wood and Johnson. The issue between them is clear. Wood stands for the League of Nations with proper reservations, he stands opposed to the spirit of radicalism which would throw this government into a conflict of classes; Johnson stands against any League of Nations, and is supported by the radical and disgruntled elements, which if given control, would plunge this country into an abyss of discord and confusion.

It is unquestionable that Johnson does not represent a majority of the Republican party in this state. But he represents an active and uncompromising minority, and the obvious danger which Hoover foresaw, and in withdrawing sought to prevent, is that the right-minded majority would be split, and thus give the state to the minority candidate.

This would be a calamity,—a calamity for the state, for the party, and, perhaps for the country. Some of the Wood supporters fear the Hoover sentiment will go to Johnson. Such an assumption is absurd. The Hoover sentiment is grounded in principle. It will never go to a man who repudiates their principles. There is no enthusiasm in the Hoover camp for either Wood or Lowden, but there is no doubt the Hoover request, to unite upon a candidate who thinks as he thinks, will be generally followed.

Of the two men, Wood and Lowden, the former will be given the main Hoover support, simply because he is politically the stronger man. No one can deliver the Hoover vote. It is essentially independent, strongly averse to the time-honored practices of machine politicians. But deprived of its true leader, it will automatically go to the strongest man available, best calculated to embody those principles in which Hoover believes.

WHAT IT MEANS.

JOHNSON is a clever politician. He was among the first public men to sense the inevitable war reaction. He saw more clearly than anyone else, that the high moral fervor, which sent two million American soldiers to France, would be followed by moral revulsion, centered in a materialism as low and selfish, as its former idealism had been high and exalted.

Johnson's present strength lies in his shrewd capitalization of this psychology. But like most opportunists, Johnson must win quickly or he will not win at all. There are already indications that the high wave of war reaction has reached its flood. The beginning is not as one might expect, among the sentimentalists, but among the practical-minded business men.

At the meeting of foreign trade delegates in San Francisco the other day, James A. Farrel, president of the United States Steel corporation, sounded a note of warning against the Johnson brand of American selfishness and isolation, far more effective than any amount of political propoganda.

He declared the war had completely changed the economic arrangement of the world. America must be prepared to develop its trade with foreign countries, must return not only to peace, but to an international arrangement to insure peace and establish confidence and friendship among the nations or a serious industrial depression is inevitable. We quote:

"We shall be confronted in a quite unmistakable way, with the fact that we are able to produce more than we can sell at home. We shall face, accordingly, such an urgency for foreign trade as we never before experienced. For, either, we shall find markets abroad for the surplus of our industrial productivity or we shall cease to produce it, which is quite unthinkable. That way lies stagnation, unemployment and business reverses."

What does that mean? It means that some League of Nations must be established, some world organization for peace must be attained, that the cheap campaign cry of America for Americans, the specious appeal of national selfishness is not only poor morals but poor business, that it means neither peace nor prosperity, it means conflict and ruin.

For it is plain to any thinking person, that the modern world is inextricably bound together economically. And an economic understanding can not exist without a political understanding. If America is not to do its part in establishing world peace, America can't take her part in world prosperity.

Small wonder Hiram Johnson has set about to show the Eastern business men he isn't as radical as he sounds. For as the war reflex wears off, it is American business that first awakens to the fact, that alluring as the prospect of erecting a Chinese wall about the country may seem, it spells disaster,—not only disaster for those American ideals to which every true American at heart responds, but to the economic stability, which is the foundation of American well being.

DER TAG.

WHEN a panic comes and swats us, bringing forty kinds of woe, and the sheriff comes and trots us to the court where bankrupts go, then we'll wonder, oh we'll wonder, why, in booming, bulging times, when the trees were growing plunder, we refused to save some dimes. When the panic that's predicted by the wise men everywhere, comes along, and we're afflicted with a poor-house bill of fare, then we'll do some idle raving and we'll kick ourselves a verst, for we didn't do our saving when the boom was at its worst. Now that everything seems sunny, and our chances are the best, it's the time to put some money, with some mothballs, in a chest; put it down with cedar shavings, so the insects won't annoy; for the man who has his savings in the wisest kind of boy. Soon this crazy boom may trundle to the tomb in ghostly robe; then the man who has a bundle is the man who'll ride the globe.

OREGONIAN MADE A 27 POUND GAIN TAKING TANLAC

"I have actually gained twenty-seven pounds in weight and feel just like a new man since I began taking Tanlac," said Dan Reed, a woodman, who lives at Bend, Ore., while in the Owl drug store recently. Continuing, he said:

"Some time ago I began to have trouble with my stomach. My appetite became very poor and I finally got to where I would have to force down every mouthful I ate, and when I did this I would suffer with intense cramping pains in my stomach afterward. I would also feel something awful and my heart would palpitate terribly and it would be all I could do to get my breath. I lost so much weight that I finally became so weak I could hardly drag myself around. When I got up in the morning I always felt worse than when I went to bed, and I had no energy and just felt tired and worn out all the time.

"I had been reading so much about Tanlac in the newspapers and the good it was doing others I decided to give it a trial, and it commenced to help me almost at once. My appetite improved and I began to pick up in weight and strength. I have taken seven bottles in all now, and am glad to say I have been completely relieved of all my troubles. I can eat anything I want without suffering any bad after effects and all that tired, worn out feeling has gone. I can sleep all night long without waking and always get up in the morning feeling ready for my day's work, and while the job of a woodman naturally requires a great deal of physical strength I can do as much as I ever did. Tanlac did me a great service in restoring my health, and I am always glad to tell others about it, and never miss an opportunity to do so."

JOHN B. WIMER ANSWERS TERRILL

To the Public: In defense of my candidacy for sheriff I am forced to answer the letter wrote for and signed C. E. Terrill, which appeared in the Medford Tribune and Ashland Tidings the 12th and 13th inst.

Since this attack on my platform, through the papers and otherwise, and his candidacy is based on FACTS, as he says, with "Strict Law Enforcement" as his slogan I wonder if it wouldn't have been better instead of attacking my candidacy, for him to have explained why one of his road deputies, wearing the star of Jackson county at the time, together with others was not prosecuted for bringing booze over the line the night California went dry instead of being allowed to retain their booze and go unprosecuted. Was this "strict law enforcement?" Those are facts that can be substantiated, which he did not mention.

Mr. Terrill has not acted as juvenile and truant officer on his own voluntary expense having idea. He has acted as such because the county court did away with those officers and made it incumbent on the sheriff to handle this work.

Mr. Terrill had nothing to do with sending out those delinquency notices last December, that he infers he did, which he says, and I agree with him, was a great benefit to delinquent property owners. His name did appear printed on the notices as that was the only name that could be used. Those notices were sent at my suggestion and under my supervision after consulting with the county court on the best method to take in interest of the property owners in adjusting their delinquencies prior to the county selling the property. Who deserves the credit?

Mr. Terrill states that it cost about $1000.00 to make up the tax receipts this spring but he failed to say that this only covered the first half receipts and that under the present antique system the same process will have to be repeated this fall for second half receipts at about the same cost making about $2000.00 for the year when from $1000.00 to $1200.00 should cover it for the whole year. That is where I propose to save from $500.00 to $1000.00 per year.

I will admit that it is rather expensive, if it is true as Mr. Terrill infers, for the county to pay him a salary for one term while he is learning the business preparatory to a second term, and I will admit that a great many officers do spend their first term in learning the business and making a good fellow of themselves while their deputies do work which they can hold up as a recommendation of a successful administration to gain second term votes, and I will go further and say that many officers do better their first term than they do the second term. If Mr. Terrill does not believe in changing officers so often, why was he so keen to run to take the second term from Mr. Jennings. Expense of changing officers depends on qualifications of the man elected.

I have stated my qualifications which includes 18 years practical commercial and executive experience, and I feel from my service as chief deputy last six months of 1919 that I thoroughly know the needs and requirements of the office, both inside and out, and need no one term to get acquainted with it, and if nominated and elected the promises set out in my platform will be established as facts of record.

Read the Bible Standard Some Gospel Information

An article in the "Bible Standard" answers the questions of the many inquirers regarding our voluntary withdrawal from the Apostolic Faith.

This paper, which is devoted to the preaching of the full gospel of Jesus Christ will be distributed to every home in Medford. If you want it sent regularly to your home please send your name and address to headquarters in Portland, Oregon.

It is my duty as a minister of the clean, pure gospel of Jesus Christ to inform my many friends and brethren in Medford because many have been misinformed, why twelve ordained ministers of the Apostolic Faith including myself, recently left that organization and are in the Bible Standard Missions.

You are invited to the Bible Standard Mission in Central Point.
