Ye Smudge Pot

By Arthur Perry

Socialism—that rugged faith of the masses has started to weaken at the knees. Eugene Debs, their presidential candidate, in coop, kissed the delegates, who came to notify him he was "it."

The administration is opposed to a bonus for ex-service men. It would be far better to fritter away the money involved on a mandate for Armenia.

"Wanted—Middle aged woman to polish, scrub, and clean. Phone 627-R" (Want ad Portland Journal). Usually they are wanted "to wash" only.

No wonder the bank clerks are always tired. For instance, last week they were subjected to two and one-half days of rest.

It is proposed by a congressman from Iowa to restore order in Mexico by building a "comprehensive irrigation system," so the peons can keep starvation away. If this fertile valley is any criterion for what irrigation will do in the way of soothing, Mexico has no knowledge of what a revolution really is.

"I had been a sufferer from lung trouble, stomach trouble, disordered kidneys, backache, headache, sleeplessness and a general rundown condition, for the past three years," Mr. Sumner continued. "I had little or no appetite."

The 1920 carrot crop will only be half a crop, the department of agriculture reports, and beanery cooks will have nothing to put in the soup.

There is no scarcity of fishermen and auto mechanics. The pole and the monkey wrench have it on the pitchfork and the plow.

Memorial Day

By James L. Henry, Serg. U. S. M. C.

A new significance is attached to Memorial Day.

Today, and upon the same day each year for all time to come, we shall recall an event that has made its mark upon the pages of history as nothing else ever did.

It was a touch of fate that sealed this day forever to the most glorious memories that a day could have.

For, on May 30, 1918—

The British armies had crumpled and given way before the rush of the Hunns. Soissons had been taken. Chateau Thierry was in the hands of the Boche and the French were down-hearted, almost demoralized.

Within 15 miles of Paris the labor battalions were frantically at work on the last line of trenches, the final network of barbed wire across the Paris-Metz highway.

Out in the forest of Gohain "Big Bertha" was sending her cylinders of death into Paris where every 42nd was shaded.

Down the paved highways came the valorous troops of France, with drawn lips uttering the sentence of despair:

"Finis la guerre! Finis Paris!"

France could already hear the steady tread of the hobnailed Germans, marching in victorious array down the Champs Elysees. For their the war was ended!

And then on Memorial Day—our Memorial Day—

"Vive l'armee Americaine!"

"The Americans were coming!"

The hurried orders had been sent forth to the men in olive drab while they were in the very act of laying wreaths upon the graves of their comrades who had fallen in previous engagements.

To the Fifth and Sixth regiments of Marines, to the Ninth and Twenty-third regiments of United States regu-

IN FLANDERS FIELDS

THIS poem was written by Lieut. Col. John McCrae of the Canadian expeditionary forces. It has been declared the greatest poem of the war. Colonel McCrae died at Boulogne, France, January 28, 1918:

In Flanders fields the poppies grow, Between the graves, row on row, That mark our place; and in the sky The larks, still bravely singing fly, Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the dead. Short days ago We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow, Loved and were loved; and now we lie In Flanders fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe! To you from failing hands we throw The torch. Be yours to lift it high! If ye break faith with us who die We shall not sleep, the poppies blow On Flanders fields.

IN FLANDERS FIELDS

THIS reply to the poem was written by C. B. Galbreath, Columbus, Ohio, who is Ohio state librarian:

In Flanders fields the cannon boom And fitful flashes light the gloom, While up above, like eagles fly, The fierce destroyers of the sky, With stains the earth wherein you lie Is redder than the poppy bloom, In Flanders fields.

Sleep on, ye brave. The shrieking shell, The quaking trench, the startled yell, The fury of the battle hell Shall wake you not, for all is well, Sleep peacefully, for all is well.

Your flaming torch aloft we bear, With burning heart an oath we swear To keep the faith, to fight it thru, To crush the foe or sleep with you In Flanders fields.

The Flag Goes By Again

The Flag goes by again— But no ruffled drumming, nor strident fanfare Of trumpet, or bugle, or rifle fills the air. As it flut in the days when battle's red glare Transfigured the faces of men, Inspiring in them a courageous intent To shed the last drop of their blood, or content To lay down their lives and call them well spent, For love of their fellowmen.

The Flag goes by again— But the rhythmical tread of the panopled hosts Which answered in person the enemy's boasts That the soldiers of freedom should ne'er reach their coasts, Echoes not in street, or hall, For the clamor is hushed by the requiem bell Which tolls for the soldier a funeral knell As he sinks to repose in his flower-roofed cell, To await eternity's call.

The Flag goes by again— And the voice of the mourners lamenting call The name of the sleeper beneath the gray pall. It disturbs not his slumber; he hears not at all, But he is not dead—just gone. To some beautiful country beyond our dim sight, That must be quite near to us for, in the night, The visions we see fill the heart with delight, His spirit has only passed on.

The Flag goes by again— And the form that it follows, inanimate clay, Must soon lose its beauty and molder away. But the spirit eternal, not touched with decay Nor subject to mortal will, Without end, or beginning, or limit of place, Still lives with its glory unfettered in space, And says to the grieving heart: "Look on My face, I am that I Am, peace be still."

The Flag goes by again— And what does it matter where heroes are laid, Beneath Flanders poppies, or Argonne's cool shade, Or under the sod of their own native glade, Supreme sacrifice hallows the place. And naught can be said that will add to their fame, Or the valor emblazoned in letters of flame, And sealed with their blood beyond chance of defame. "Omni, requiescat en pace."

The Flag goes by again— And when it is passing may each let a tear Of sympathy fall on his laurel-crowned bier, To comfort the ones who are leaving him here, To lie in solemn state, Till the Captain up yonder shall say, "Well, done, Thou hast fought a good fight and the victory won; Thy warfare is over, thy race was well run, Pass in through the golden gate."

(Written by W. R. Kirkpatrick, of Greensburg, Indiana, brother of P. J. Kirkpatrick, of Medford.)

lars, to the Second engineers, to the artillery, to the Seventh machine gun battalion of the Third Division the orders went for hurried entrainment in the big caissons and for the rush into the line. That order was received at 8 o'clock on the evening of Memorial Day, May 30, 1918. The rest we all know—how the Marines at Belleau Wood, at Boursches, Lucey le Roeux, La Voie du Chatol, and the crossing of the Paris-Metz road, made the stand that electrified the world and put new heart into the withering allied army of the fighting of the Ninth and Twenty-third in the region of Vaux, the noble stand of the machine gun battalions at the bridge across the Marne at Chateau Thierry, and the artillery in support. Small wonder, then that General George Barnett, commandant of the Marine Corps, requests all caissons and posts where marines are stationed to hold fitting exercises on this day and pay homage to their comrades of the corps for whom the bugle has sounded the last call of taps, not only at Belleau Wood, but in all the great battles of the late war in which marines participated. In Medford, and all over the United States, let us solemnly dedicate ourselves to the task on each Memorial Day of paying homage to all the men, soldiers, sailors and marines, both living and dead, who just a brief two years ago, brought by their arms and their courage,—Victory!

AT NIGHT.

WHEN I lay me down to rest, at ten minutes after nine, having all day done my best, tranquil is the heart of mine. I have gained an honest plunk, earned it in the sweat that pours; so I lie upon my bunk, springing ground and lofty snores. I have done no evil trick, I have done no neighbor ill, I have fleeced no trusting hick, I have jumped no merchant's bill. If I've injured any gent, if I've caused pure awkwardness, I guess. So I seek my humble cot, and in dreams my spirit soars; and the neighbors hear, I wot, all my plain and fancy snores. Oh, the long and dragging nights that the crooked people know! Then it is that Conscience smites with a solar plexus blow. In the day the sinful guys may proceed with haughty tread; in the night the ghosts arise, and stand grinning round the bed. If you'd know a sleep profound, if you'd know what sweet dreams mean, if you'd have no ghosts around, you must have a mind serene. There is sorrow in the night, there are phantoms breathing woe, if your conscience isn't white as the well known driven snow.

BUNNY

Johnny bought a bunny To bring him in some money. His neighbors thought it funny The way he cared for Bunny. They sure did show surprise, When Bunny took the prize.

Bunny quickly multiplied; The neighbors had a treat, For Johnny had some fried. And gave them some to eat. They soon came back for more, Which didn't make Johnny sore.

Five years have passed Since Johnny bought that bunny. The neighbors are surprised By Bunny bringing the money; For Johnny has an auto. The result of following his motto.

Bunny brought the money, Bunny took the prize, Bunny saved the money. When Mr. Pork took a rise; For Bunny staved the same, While his fur made a name.

Have patience and win with Bunny. Have perseverance too; Then Bunny'll bring the money And all the pleasure too, For H. C. L. gave way When Bunny came to stay.
