New arguments will be submitted and the referendum ballots will be returned in the envelopes provided for the final election of directors.

WOOL GROWERS OF OREGON FORM BIG SELLING AGENCY

PORTLAND, Ore., Mar. 17.—Wool from about 300,000 sheep on the farms of western Oregon will be assembled and graded and marketed in Portland, according to the plans announced today of the Western Oregon Wool and Mohair association, which was recently formed.

R. A. Wade resigned as vice-president of the First National bank of Bend last week to come to Portland and manage the association's affairs.

The plan is to concentrate in this city the wool and mohair of the western part of the state and ultimately to market the farm flock clips of Washington as well as Oregon. Overturns have already been made from sheepmen in northern California to join the association which is to be co-operative concern. The association is to be conducted without a view to profits, the farmers to get the market price for the grade of their wool, less the cost of marketing.

The Screen

"Conrad in Quest of His Youth"

If you believe yourself to be old at thirty-five and that life has nothing further in store for you, you should see Thomas Meighan in William De Mille's splendid picture, "Conrad in Quest of His Youth" which opened a four days' engagement at the Rialto theatre yesterday.

Without telling the story in detail, the central idea of the story—that one never grows old when one loves—fills one with enthusiasm. Conrad finds it impossible to travel the road back to seventeen, because there is none, but when he fell in love, presto! his vanished youth returned.

Mr. Meighan is supported by an unusually capable company, Margaret Loomis playing opposite him. Then there are Mabel Van Buren, Kathryn Williams, Sylvia Ashton and other artists, all of whom contribute their bit to make the picture artistically satisfying.

"Once to Every Woman"

Dorothy Phillips, who won the hearts of local theatregoers in a dozen previous screen productions, notably her two most recent photodramas, "The Heart of Humanity" and "Paid in Advance," won new friends at the Page theatre yesterday when she appeared in her latest feature, "Once to Every Woman."

A short review fails to do justice to the character drawing, the artistic development of the story and the masterly details. This photoplay must be seen to be appreciated, and the indications are that few local theatregoers will miss it.
