We can tell you of thousands who have been permanently cured of chronic constipation, indigestion, biliousness, sick headache and disorders of the stomach and liver, but this will have little weight with you as compared to a personal trial. That always convinces.

EASTER BAZAAR IS WELL PATRONIZED

The Easter bazaar of the Presbyterian church, which was held Thursday in the church parlors, drew crowds of eager purchasers all day and evening. The booths were attractively decorated with Japanese novelties, greens and spring flowers. Useful and fancy aprons, rugs, fancy articles, candy and pastry were on sale throughout the day.

More than two hundred dollars was added to the association treasury by the affair. Much credit is due Mrs. Andrews for her able management and to all the ladies of the church, who worked so faithfully to contribute toward the success of the affair.

A meeting of the Woman's association will be held in the chapel of the church Tuesday afternoon at which the retiring officers will act as hostesses.

A few rugs and aprons remaining from the bazaar will be on sale during the afternoon.

SWEETHEART SHOP PAGE APRIL 12TH

A novelty in musical comedy, which is awaited with much interest is the "Sweetheart Shop" coming to the Page theatre, Tuesday, April 12th, direct from four weeks at Columbia theatre, San Francisco. This is the only musical comedy that has played four weeks in San Francisco for five years.

Fresh from triumphs in New York, Chicago and Boston the coast has welcomed this musical success. The entire original cast and chorus are announced.

Edgar J. MacGregor, under whose direction the play is presented, has provided artistic stage settings and beautiful costume, with rich display of gowns of the ultra-fashionable kind. The company presents to an unusual degree the charm of youth and boasts of an exceedingly pretty chorus.

The principals are Harry K. Morton, the acrobatic comedian; Esther Howard, whose successes as a female funster has placed her in a class by herself; Helen Ford, Zella Russell, Roy Gordon, Daniel Healy, Marion Sakl. There are three scenes, the locale of which are "The Sweetheart Shop," an artist's studio in Greenwich Village and a Fifth Avenue, New York auction room.

considered our finances and decided we could afford to maintain such a navy, by which the island empire could be defended against any emergencies arising in the Far East alone.

M. Kato dwelt on how the advanced cost of building and the increased size of capital ships had enormously expanded Japan's naval expenditures until the budget for 1921 carried $250,000,000 for this purpose alone. He said the cost of construction was approximately twice what it was before the war but he explained that Japan's determination to build big ships was not due to her own initiative but to the necessity of following the latest type of capital ship in the great navies.

Can't Compete With U. S. A.

"I regret very much to see sinister propagandists or mischief makers trying to attribute our naval program to a desire to compete with the United States navy," he said. "Nothing could be more preposterous and absurd than this contention. Needless to say the Japanese government desires the most cordial relations with the American navy."

"What is your attitude regarding a conference for the discussion of the

"Since a young man I had a liking for liquor and was considered a pretty good judge of it at one time, but constant drinking gave me stomach trouble which became chronic. My stomach would have been a valuable addition to a gas factory. Doctors did not seem to relieve me. One day my druggist got me to try May's Wonderful Remedy, and I am now as good as new." restriction of armaments?" he was asked. "The Japanese government," he replied, "joined the League of Nations and in doing so supported the principle of the reduction of armaments. Whenever there is an international conference on armament reduction I will be only too glad to cooperate honestly with other governments to give effect to this principle."

Willing to Reduce.

"Although there is a clamor for the restriction of armaments through out the world, yet, taking into consideration the real international situation and the present status of the national powers I do not believe our relatively inferior navy should lead the way in reducing, nor that we should curtail our established plan. If a dependable international agreement comes into being, whereby all naval powers would agree to restrict their naval forces, however, I would be very glad to join to a reasonable extent, if a suitable formula could be agreed upon. Therefore I do not insist upon the completion of our so-called 'eight-eight' program."

GETTING THE UPPER HAND

Railroad and telephone communications with Eidsleben has been cut and no automobilist has been found daring enough to enter the city in his car. The correspondent came into the town on foot.

The telegraph office was found in the hands of the police who consented to transmit this report of the fighting, the sending of the message proceeding while machine guns raked the adjacent streets and the people living nearby were huddled in their darkened houses, peering through the blinds.

The workmen were holding municipal lighting plant but permitted its continued operation.

All the roads leading into the town are under fire.

The fighting at this hour appeared to be growing in intensity and it seemed probable that further wire communication with the outside world would have to be from Halle, eighteen miles distant.

PARIS, Mar. 25.—Official circles here regard the communist uprising in Germany as "spurious" basing their judgment on dispatches received in this city.

The latest reports reaching official quarters are to the effect that a large number of Russian bolsheviks succeeded in entering Hamburg, bringing with them large supplies of money for propaganda purposes. The uprising there is attributed for the most part to their influence.

orders in Prussian Saxony and in Hamburg. Following the first outbreak of violence in many Saxony towns there came yesterday a period of comparative quiet but officials proceeded on the theory that new outbreaks might come at any time. Forces of security police were near Eidsleben last night and it is believed a clash with the communists who yesterday were in virtual control of that city is imminent. Loyal forces were holding a part of the town but were being besieged by the communists, according to last reports. Organized labor seems not to have lent its support to the revolutionary movement.
