WITNESS CLAIMS WALKER OVERDRAFT NOT OVER $2500

Under cross examination in the circuit court this morning in the trial of the civil action of F. C. Bramwell, acting for the state banking board against A. W. Walker for approximately $49,000, for alleged overdrafts and promissory notes, W. H. Johnson, former cashier of the defunct Bank of Jacksonville freely admitted his own juggling of accounts, and along to his story that the defendant, in a conversation in the county jail in October, 1920, had "made a proposition" for him to introduce "phony deposit slips" to cover the overdraft.

Questioned by Attorney Gus Newbury for the defense Johnson admitted no one was present but himself and Walker, and that he had committed a "strategic error" when he had returned the mysterious slip containing amounts from which he filled out the deposit slips, to Walker. Johnson admitted reluctantly that Walker had given him his wife $100 shortly after he was arrested, but denied that it was upon his solicitation, or that he had told the defendant that "my family is in dire need."

Bank of Jacksonville in 1917, and that he had told Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wahl that Walker's indebtedness was $2500, but denied that he had made a similar statement to Walker and Delroy Getchell of the Farmer's and Fruitgrower's bank, when they visited him in Jacksonville to settle up the account.

Johnson also admitted that he had made false statements to the bank examiners regarding the amount of overdrafts, and that he had altered many accounts, but that he had done this through fear of exposure, but this fear had left him once he was behind the walls of the county jail. He claimed that he had never told the true status of the Walker account, until he began an investigation of the bank books with the state banking board, and admitted that "he never knew exactly what it was until recently."

The witness also declared that he "never kept but one set of books." It was claimed by the bank examiners that Johnson for years was able to deceive them by this means. The defense will attempt to show that the present computation of Walker's account is incorrect, that not one, let alone two sets of books were kept by Johnson, and that all the evidence of indebtedness is based largely upon the memory of Johnson.

The witness, who is suffering from a severe cold was a voluble witness for the plaintiff, but his memory was always hazy on vital points for the defense. There was a larger crowd than usual in attendance at the trial this morning, many of the spectators being friends of the defendant from various parts of the state and valley.

LAST FORUM OF FISCAL YEAR AT HOLLAND HOTEL

The fifty-second forum of the Medford Chamber of Commerce will be held at the Holland Hotel tomorrow noon. This is the last one for the fiscal year and a record has been made in that not a Wednesday forum was missed during the fiscal year.

Automobile and highway legislation at the last legislative session is the subject to be discussed by Benj. C. Sheldon. Legislation effecting automobiles and highways is becoming more of a problem every year and therefore it should receive a greater attention by the citizens of the state.

John C. Mann, one of the vice-chairmen of the forum committee will preside and there will be a short report from Mr. J. H. Sykes of the office of the state fire marshal, who has just about completed a fire prevention survey of Medford.

Unless members of the Chamber of Commerce, who have never attended a forum, do so tomorrow, the record of attendance as being kept at headquarters will show a blank space after their names.

ELECTRIC CURRENT OFF WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON

The California-Oregon Power company announces a change in the hour set for interruption of all electric service in Medford and Phoenix. Current will be shut off during the hour, from 4:30 until 5:30 Wednesday afternoon instead of the early morning hour as previously announced. This change is made at the earnest solicitation of the large number of poultry men who depend upon electric current for incubation, in order that the warm daylight may aid in keeping their incubators heated.

This interruption is necessitated by the installation of an additional set of transformers at the Medford substation and it may be necessary to repeat the same once or twice more within the next week.

J. BURROUGHS DEAD

birds and growing things. There was something very simple about him, and yet with it all there was a thoroughness of investigation and a hardihood of endurance that gave him rank as a natural man. I believe if you had offered John Burroughs a million dollars in one hand and the sight of a new bird in another, he would have chosen a sight of the new bird. The very last time he was at my farm he saw a winter bird from the north that he had never seen before and the discovery filled him with animated interest for days. Hosts of Friends. "We always talked a good deal together. John Burroughs could articulate his philosophy while I could merely feel mine, and so we got on well together, understanding each other. His philosophy was just what he felt and his work was just what he did. He always brought his new books to me and I would sometimes show him some of the things I was working on. "He was a great companion. He was absolutely child-like in his belief in people. For a man who saw so few people he had hosts of friends. He was a fine camp mate. For him the deserted wilderness was more alive than the populous cities. That was the main characteristic of Mr. Burroughs,—he was alive and his eyes were open.
