NEXT MOVE TO GET HIGHER UP IN BANK CASE

District Attorney to Query W. H. Johnson Regarding C. H. Owens, the Master Mind in Bank Case—Search Thus Far Fruitless.

The indictment against C. H. Owens, alleged to be the "master mind" of the bank failure still stands, but the county authorities have not the slightest idea where he is. He is charged with having an overdraft of $21,000, but this amount has been credited by further investigations into the bank affairs. Owens is alleged to have interested W. H. Johnson, ex-cashier of the bank in a Nevada land promotion scheme, and to have bilked him systematically. It is said that Johnson sent Owens $750 weekly for several months, the checks being cashed by Portland hotels. As soon as Johnson recovers from his attack of the flu he will be questioned on this point by the district attorney.

A review of the legal action in the circuit court relative to the failure of the Bank of Jacksonville, at the term concluded Wednesday in the hearing of two criminal actions, and three civil actions, is as follows:

Mrs. Myrtle Blakeley, former county treasurer, tried for malfeasance in office, jury disagreed, will be retried on same charge at the May term of court.

GREATEST RELIGIOUS SPECTACLE IN NATION'S HISTORY ATTENDS FUNERAL OF CARDINAL GIBBONS

Tremendous Army of Mourners Representing All Sections of Country and All Religions Gather in Baltimore to Do Honor to Great Catholic Leader—Honors Hitherto Granted Only in Cistine Chapel, Rome, Bestowed in American Cathedral—Sacred Rites of Middle Ages Join in Tribute With Ceremonies of Modern World.

BALTIMORE, Mar. 31.—With all the splendor of a ceremony centuries old, the Roman Catholic church today laid to rest one of its most revered and faithful servants—Cardinal James Gibbons, archbishop of Baltimore and the second American to be elevated to the cardinalate.

Archbishop John Bonzano, apostolic delegate at Washington, celebrated a pontifical requiem mass in the cathedral of the Blessed Virgin Mary, with seminaries chanting Gregorian music never before heard outside the Sistine chapel in Rome.

Archbishop John J. Glennon of St. Louis delivered the funeral sermon. During his eulogy of the dead there burned scarcely a dry eye among his hearers whose memories went back to the kindly, gentle old man who with power of spirit as well as power of mind.

The service was like a scene from the middle ages, like an altar piece come to life. Numberless priests in a seemingly endless procession filed into the church and in their stately robes of the varied colors of their orders, moved forward to the catafalque on which rested the late cardinal in his archbishop's vestments of purple.

In a few moments the body of the church was filled with this army of clergy and the atmosphere of the 20th century was dispelled.

There was a harmony of color and sound, as the light of the candles around the bier fell on the brilliant ceremonial robes of the priests and the auditorium echoed to the measured chant of the prayers.

BALTIMORE, Md., Mar. 31.—The greatest assemblage of church dignitaries ever assembled on this coast gathered today for the funeral of Cardinal James Gibbons.

They came from the east, west, north, south and from across the border to mourn the loss of the leader.

By nine o'clock, an hour before the time for the ceremony, streets surrounding the cathedral were so crowded with clergy and tally that not a square inch of pavement could be seen. At ten o'clock the whole city, by gubernatorial and mayoral proclamation were urged to drop every activity for a minute in respect to a man numbered among most distinguished citizens. Every motor, street car and wagon was directed to stop in its track when the clocks of the city tolled ten.

Early in the morning the clergy began forming in front of Calvert Hall college, diagonally opposite the cathedral for the professional. Spectacle is impressive. It was an impressive spectacle, regular clergy in the colors of their respective orders headed the line, and beside them the secular clergy, followed by the monsignori, Cardinals O'Connell and Begin and Archbishop John Bonzano, apostolic delegate and celebrant of the mass. All the higher church dignitaries wore mourning color of purple.

Inside the cathedral, under the gilded dome at the foot of the center aisle lay the body of Cardinal James Gibbons, archbishop of Baltimore. He rested on a purple-covered catafalque, dressed in his archbishop's robes. Wearing on his head his archbishop's mitre and on one finger the ring that so many thousands had kissed during his life.

The rays of tall white candles lighted his benign features. At the foot of the bier was the cardinal's hat of red.

It was obvious that only a small part of the thousands who sought entry to the cathedral would be able to pass the great portico, with its tall columns draped in purple and black. Most of the space was allotted to the clergy and admittance was by ticket only.

Army of Mourners. But this did not shake the great army of mourners in their hope of attending the mass, or at least, massed around the great stone pile of catching the strains of church music that might be wafted to them. Disappointment staring them in the face, they stood their ground with the same determination that had been displayed by the tens of thousands who yesterday pressed their way into the edifice to view the body of their devoted leader.

Today really held two ceremonies. One was the great church assemblage at mass—the church bestowing her honors on one who long had served her faithfully. The other was the simple burial service in the crypt of white marble under the cathedral sanctuary—the relatives and close friends taking leave of one dear to them.

Cardinal Gibbons is the seventh soldier of the church to be buried in this vault and to him was allotted a place on the north side. The last time the crypt was opened was in 1872 when Archbishop Spalding was buried there.
