MADRID, SPAIN, A CAPITAL CITY BY NECESSITY

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Madrid, capital of Spain, which was almost alone among European countries to emerge from the war period with a balance of trade in its favor and with surplus cash in its coffers, is described in the following bulletin issued from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society. It was in Madrid that the Spanish premier, Senor Dato, was recently assassinated as he was leaving the Hall of Congress.

"While Madrid was not 'made from the whole cloth' as Canberra, the new capital of Australia is being fashioned," says the bulletin, "in a way it is truly an artificial capital. Physically, the rather bleak table-land on which Madrid is situated had little to commend it as a site for a capital of a great city save the fact that it is almost the exact geographical center of Spain. But it was political pressure that really pushed the Spanish court to the former Moorish village of Madrid; because the jealousy of each other felt by the Castilians, the Aragonese, the people of Toledo and Seville, and all the other groups would not permit the selection of an existing city of importance when Spain became united.

Site Like Those in American West "Picture a bare plateau in the semi-arid American west, an insignificant stream several hundred feet below its crest, and its top and sides deeply carved by erosion, forming 'arroyos'—the beds of torrents formed quickly in the rainy season, but usually dry. Madrid, must have been much like this when the Spanish, in their fight to redeem the 'Spain Iprenta' of those days captured the place from the Moors in 1083. Castilian monarchs lived in the unimportant Madrid off and on for several hundred years, but it was first made the seat of the government of united Spain in 1560. It is thus one of the youngest of the great cities and capitals of Europe.

"The smallness of Madrid when Philip II made it the Spanish capital brought about the institution of a queer tax from which flowed queer results. It was decreed that all persons possessing houses above a certain size must take in as guests courtiers and nobles who attended the court. The canny Spaniards who carried on any building operations took care to build houses just short of the mark. They were termed 'spite houses' by the courtiers, and the Madrid of a few hundred years ago became full of them.

French Once Held City "The small houses naturally did not bring beauty to old Madrid. In addition the town was poorly cleaned and even in the middle of the eighteenth century had the reputation of being one of the dirtiest capitals in Europe. The Bourbons early in the eighteenth century began to build palaces and public buildings, however, and the French, during the brief hold which they had in Madrid at the height of Napoleon's power, started a number of improvements. The network of railroads which covered Spain during the nineteenth century, with Madrid as their focus, gave the capital its greatest impetus.

...manufacture, trade, wealth and population have come in the wake of the railroads. The population has passed well beyond the 550,000 mark and is increasing rapidly. Fine streets, fine buildings, and wonderful parks and promenades have transformed the city's appearance in the last half century. In the parks and around the city many trees have been planted. They have done away with the aspect of barrenness and have even mitigated to some extent the severity of the hot summer weather.

Has World Famous Picture Gallery "To the east, less than half a mile from the city's heart,—the Puerta del Sol, where ten streets meet—is the famous Prado and the 'Paseos,' or promenades, that extend it to the northward and the southward. These great wide spaces and boulevards with rows of from five to eight trees in their center, form one of the most handsome promenades and 'show streets' in the world.

"Across the space of the Prado is the renowned 'Museo de Prado'—often itself called merely 'The Prado'—a picture gallery which houses one of the world's most wonderful collections of the paintings of the masters. It undoubtedly rivals the collection in the Louvre, and is claimed by Spaniards to surpass it. The Prado gallery is particularly famous for its group of the best works of the great Spanish master, Velazquez, who lived and worked in Madrid. Statues to Velazquez and to other famous Madrilenos, Cervantes, and the Spanish Shakespeare, Calderon de la Barca, adorn the parks.

"A mile or more to the northeast of the Prado across the city's most extensive park, 'The Retreat,' is what may be considered the antithesis of the world-famous picture gallery. It is a great circular amphitheatre, a somewhat smaller Roman Colosseum. It is the 'Plaza de Toros'—the bull ring—in which 14,000 Madrilenos gather on feast days to see their favorite matadores kill bull after bull."

John Brady, selected from an orphanage by Judge John Green of Tipton, Indiana, as the rudest and ugliest boy, later became governor-general of Alaska.

ASHLAND PARENT TEACHERS DICTATE FEMININE STYLES

ASHLAND, April 15.—No use of going either to Portland or Paris for the latest fashions in both millinery and dressmaking, for prevailing styles are dictated right here, while the price is a mere bagatelle as compared with the imported articles. Credit for this state of affairs is to be given for the success attending the millinery and dressmaking classes now in vogue, nearly a hundred women taking advantage of the part-time classes in the vocations aforesaid, activities having been pursued under auspices of the Ashland Parent-Teacher association. Mrs. G. N. Gray and Miss Freeman directed the classes in millinery, while Miss Huntsbury tutored the dressmaking contingent, the result being the formation of a sort of building and trades council in the construction of dresses and hats. The climax came in a fashion show which effectively demonstrated the "survival of the fittest"; the event was held at Chautauqua Pioneer hall, on Tuesday afternoon and evening of this week, and in addition to local residents many attended from various parts of the valley. The exhibit was a splendid one. Music lent added charm to the occasion, as did also the floral environment of vernal buds and blossoms. A small admission fee was charged, the proceeds going towards upkeep of the children's playgrounds. Women notable in state organizations along social, educational and economic lines were here, including Mrs. W. C. Hayhurst, of Portland, state president of the Parent-Teacher association; Bertha Davis, of Corvallis, supervisor of home economics and vocational training; Mrs. E. C. Hitchcock, corresponding secretary of the Portland chapter Daughters of the American Revolution; and Mrs. Lee Davenport, also of Portland, superintendent of Americanization of Federated clubs, a coterie of bright, well-informed ladies who will herald far and wide the success attending Ashland's unique exhibition. At a business meeting of the local Parent-Teacher unit in the afternoon, Mrs. Louis Dodge was elected president; Mrs. A. C. Joy, vice-president of Hawthorne school; Mrs. W. E. Blake, vice president of Junior high school; Mrs. Prescott, secretary.

Before adjournment here last Wednesday evening, the Southern Oregon Presbytery elected Rev. E. W. Warrington, of Roseburg, moderator for the ensuing year; Rev. R. A. Hutchinson, temporary clerk; Rev. H. G. Hanson, of Grants Pass, permanent clerk. A notable change in the ranks of the ministry was the transfer of Rev. E. P. Lawrence from Klamath Falls to Medford, J. H. Cooley of that city assuring the Presbytery that the call had been unanimous and that the Medford congregation were anxiously awaiting the arrival of their pastor-elect. Mr. Lawrence presided at the New Era conference, activities incident to conducting which incorporated discussions affecting evangelism in the churches, stewardship, world-wide missions, and religious education. Rev. W. O. Forbes, of Seattle, superintendent of religious education in the northwest, was present at this session of the Presbytery, participating in a discussion relating to important topics.

Donations to the memorial movement fund lag. The intent was to raise the necessary $700 by voluntary contributions without recourse to any solicitation whatever. In fact it was thought that, with the banks as repositories, the amount required would be subscribed in a single day. We might as well disabuse our minds of this glowing prospect, and go to it as of yore. At any rate, the monument has been contracted for, the bond implying that it will be in place by Decoration day, six weeks hence. In the meantime it behooves us to get busy, thru American Legion and other patriotic channels, raising the required amount forthwith. We seem to be able to finance almost any other phase of activity implying a liberal financial outlay, and certainly nobody wants to witness a lien existing against a memorial shaft, which tribute of respect represents a veneration for the highest patriotic ideals. Send in your contribution early, and thus avoid embarrassments connected with a soliciting campaign.
