'MARY' DELIGHTFUL LIGHT COMEDY

The lovers of musical comedy have a rich treat in store for them in the brilliant, delightful play "Mary" at the Page theatre, Monday evening, May 6. It is not a heavy comedy but is pretty and light, with an all-star cast, presented by the famous actor-author-producer George M. Cohan. It is staged by these artists, Otto Harbach, Frank Mandel and Lou Hirsch, who have provided an interesting story with the necessary love interest which is enhanced by many up-to-date musical numbers. Among the songs that are sure to attain popularity are "The Love Nest," "Mary," "When a Girl Exits Laughing," "Tom, Tom Tiddle" and "Waiting."

This is the last "legitimate" attraction on the books of the Geo. A. Hunt Co. for this season, is very highly spoken of and is guaranteed by the local management. Don't wait until this attraction is gone, then hear "You missed a treat," like you did in not seeing Marjorie Rameau and other excellent attractions, and say I wish I had gone.

At Frederick—Two mines flooded. Camp swept by water. Residents fleeing to high ground.

At Loveland—George Arndt, 69 years old, escaped from his own home when the flood approached. He went to the home of a friend for safety. As he entered he dropped dead from excitement. Water soon surrounded the friend's home and Arndt's body could not be taken out.

At Denver—City ditch rising from heavy rains of last night. Platte river in Globeville, a suburb, over its banks. Residents along the bank of the stream were obliged to throw up levees and barricades to prevent flooding of homes. Cherry Creek, Denver, high, but within its banks.

The clothes will last longer—
And so will YOU!

NOT only will the Thor lighten your labor, and change your laundry troubles to pleasures, saving your hands, your nerves, your time. But also, because of the way the Thor is built, and the way it works, your daintiest, finest things are as safe from the perils of rough handling as the stoutest fabrics. For the Thor simply can't handle clothes roughly. It surges them round in a smooth, frictionless maple cylinder, chugs them through hot foamy suds till they're wonderfully clean.

The woman who owns a Thor will advise you to have one, too.

Power to Develop Industries Largely In Hands of Women

By IDA B. CALLAHAN, President, Oregon Federation of Women's Clubs

EIGHTY to ninety per cent of the household articles and clothing for the family is bought by the women of the state.

If the women of Oregon should decide to buy Oregon Products a tremendous industrial growth would surely result. Many people who are now idle would have jobs. The factories would be increased in size. Payrolls would be larger.

Women of Oregon, let us try the plan of asking for home products. This plan, if properly supported, would mean a more prosperous Oregon and many more happy homes "out where the handclasp's a little stronger."

Ask for Oregon brands!
