JAPAN'S GRAND OLD MAN GOOD FRIEND U. S. A.

Charles Edward Russell Gives Intimate View of Marquis Okuma, Venerable Statesman of Nippon—Chinese Policy Is Explained.

By CHARLES EDWARD RUSSELL, Special Correspondent of The Mail Tribune.

TOKYO, June 9.—In prestige and influence the foremost living statesman of Japan is easily the Marquis Okuma, conspicuous in many bygone cabinets and negotiations, though not now holding any public office. He is another of those marvelous men who like Clemenceau, Humboldt and John Wesley have put at naught all our theories about the decrepitude of age and that sort of thing. He is 83, with the same keen, restless, full laboring mind he manifested sixty years ago when he first began to be prominent in public life; and except for his accident, with no loss of physical vigor. Two secretaries he keeps busy from early in the morning to late at night; he is editor of a magazine, chancellor of a great university, shrewd observer of the world and its ways, in touch with every important development, acquiring knowledge with the avidity of sixteen, storing it in an infallible memory. Time he seems to defy, he is not at all unlikely to be again the head of the government. Only five years or so have passed since he gave up the steering of things and he has not for a moment lost his grip upon them.

There When Perry Came. Few men in the world have seen anything like the great human panorama that has unfolded before his eyes. He has seen the rise of the great nation; he was a keen-eyed observer of it when Perry came with his ships and gun muzzles and opened doors that had been locked two hundred and fifty years. He saw Perry's fleet; he saw the landing and something of the negotiations. He has seen and had a part in the whole of that most extraordinary achievement, the making of the new Japan. He has held almost every place in the cabinet of his country; he has been minister of foreign affairs in some of its most acute crises; his shrewd good sense and practical wisdom have found the way out of many a difficulty.

He is a good politician as well as an able statesman; he founded the old progressive party, now the Kokumintu (nationalist party) and led it to victory. He founded the great Waseda University, whose huge halls are about to visit the United States, and saw it grow from nothing to a place among the standard universities of the world. In the midst of a life of prodigious activities he has found time to be a patron of horticulture, indulge an artistic fondness for flowers and write several books. I spoke a moment ago of his accident. It was of a nature to obliterate any man but one practicing the supremacy of mind over every other sense. Years ago his friendly attitude toward foreigners aroused a surviving fanatic of the old hermit school, who threw a bomb at him. He escaped with his life, but his left leg was so badly shattered it must be amputated.

A Self-Made Man. When I said that although of a family of distinction he began life in obscurity and has won by his own efforts all the honors he has enjoyed, I think we have a man fitted to appeal to the American imagination.

Other Nations Keep Out. I suggested that in view of his unequalled experience in the public affairs of his country and his close knowledge of its thought and genius a statement from him about Japanese-American relations would be a good thing. He assented warmly. He said: "In the first place the relations between Japan and the United States should be confined strictly to the attention of these two nations. Absolutely no other power should intrude upon them, openly, by suggestion, influence or otherwise."

I said that by all accounts the people of at least one other nation were interesting themselves unduly in the situation, with the apparent idea of fostering ill-will between Japan and the United States.

He said: "Left to themselves there can be no chance that the friendship between

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 9.—Sparring partners in Jack Dempsey's training camp will be compelled to wear head guards when boxing is resumed to lessen the danger of reopening the wound over the champion's left eye, which was split open last Sunday when Larry Williams butted him trying to evade a punch. Since then Dempsey has done no work with the gloves. "I could resume boxing now," Dempsey said today, "as the wound is not causing me any pain, but there's no use taking any chances until it is thoroughly healed." Dempsey, with boxing off the program, is concentrating on his famous shift. He stands before a heavy punching bag first shifting for a right hook and then landing a left. The champion is timing his blows accurately and is hitting sharply and with great force.

MANHATTAN, N. Y., June 9.—Polka hereabout who would like to view Georges Carpentier going through his paces during his secret training sessions, but can't, have expressed the opinion that the challenger is fooling the public. They believe his somewhat listless attitude when boxing for newspapermen is but a ruse to conceal his real powers. There is no doubt that the debonair prizefighter has a race track full of speed, for he occasionally seems to forget himself when the newspapermen are watching him, and displays a few of the traits that have made him famous.

I tried it and bought two bottles and her cough left her before she finished the second bottle. She had gotten awfully thin, but now she is as fat as ever." Sold everywhere. Adv.

Mr. Addison I. Williams, Box 1054, Sanford, Fla., writes Tyrrell's Hygienic Institute of New York as follows: "Regarding the 'J. B. L. Cascade' I feel it is one of the indispensable articles and should be in every home. I have not taken $10 worth of medicine since obtaining it—about nine years." West Side Pharmacy, Main and Grape Sts., will be glad to show and explain the "J. B. L. Cascade" to you, and will also give you free on request an interesting and authoritative book, "Why Man of Today is Only 50 per cent Efficient," written by Dr. Chan A. Tyrrell.
