UPHOLDING LAWLESSNESS.

KANSAS miners are commended by the A. F. L. for their stand against the Kansas industrial court law. Moral and financial aid is voted for "so courageously opposing this law in the face of injunctions and prison terms, and preventing the law from taking effect, thereby fighting the battles of organized labor."

What sort of battle? The industrial court law was duly passed by representatives of the people of Kansas, and approved by a majority vote of the people. Such a stand by the American Federation of Labor, merely means an official sanction of lawlessness. It means fighting the battles not of organized labor, but of unorganized revolution.

It is astonishing that the passion of class feeling should so overrule the intelligent and conservative judgment of labor leaders that they can one day, uncompromisingly condemn the philosophy of the bolshevik, and the next day, officially sanction such a typically bolshevik policy as this.

The law is the law. If it is right for the miners of Kansas to break a law they don't like, then it is right for a Bill Haywood, or an Emma Goldman to break a law they don't like. It is not for the individual, nor for any class to decide; but for the people, and in this case the people of Kansas did decide.

If the law is unconstitutional the courts provide a remedy. If the law is unjust, the ballot box provides a remedy. But until the law is repealed, it is as much the duty of organized labor to see that it is enforced, as of any other element of society.

It is such hasty, ill-considered actions as this that injures the cause of organized labor. Every time labor places its selfish advantage above the rights of the people, it loses that support of fair-minded people, which is labor's greatest strength.

A DECADE.

TEN years ago the world was fat, and basking amply in its grease; we laughed until we sprained a slat when seers foretold the end of peace. And Wilhelm changed his uniforms, was photographed twelve times a day, and courtiers, in idle swarms, admired the war lord on his way. The weary poet scratched his head to think up topics for his rhymes, and then the foolish books we read had faked-up wars in Zenda climes. The voters bought their hand-me-downs, and knew the dyes would never fade, and women wore their ample gowns, and kept their ankles in the shade. The railway barons walked in state, like princes of the royal blood; and now the row they raise is great and they confess their name is Mudd. Ten years ago I hired Jim Jones, and paid him thirty cents an hour; and now each day he draws six bones, and such a stipend makes him sour. And Russia's czar, ten years ago, still wore his crown upon his brow; somewhere beneath the northern snow his battered bones are lying now. The world is not the same old place, its teeth are loose, it's lost its hair, it has been shaken to its base, and nothing's right side up with care. And I bewail the dear dead days, that shall return no more, alas, when we all went our routine ways, and eat the old accustomed grass.

WOMAN FILES A $69,900 CLAIM ON T. R. ESTATE

HILLSDALE, Ind., June 23.—Mrs. Emma Richardson Burkett, who has filed a claim for $69,900 against the estate of the late Theodore Roosevelt to collect a note which she says the former president indorsed, today told the story of the mysterious financial transaction.

Mrs. Burkett claims she met Roosevelt and a man introduced as Charles J. Shumson, who she believed was a former Rough Rider, in a Chicago office building during the republican national campaign of 1912 and there loaned the money to Shumson on his note, backed by the former president's signature.

Mrs. Burkett scouted the suggestion that she had been duped by a clever confidence man, positing as the ex-president.

Mrs. Burkett told her story after learning that the executors of the Roosevelt estate had branded the signature on the alleged note a forgery and filed a suit to pay the claim. An uncle, Henry Richardson, a miner, who spent most of his life in Montana, Colorado and Nebraska, died in February 1912, while on the way to Alaska, and left the money in her care, the interest to be paid to his daughter, Mary Kenney, she said. She consulted a friend, a justice of the peace, now dead, in Danville, Ill., about an investment and in June, 1912 was called to Chicago, where she was introduced to Shumson and the man she believes was Colonel Roosevelt.

According to Mrs. Burkett, Shumson paid interest on the loan at the rate of 7 per cent until 1917, when he went to France. She has not since heard from him.

STRANGLER LEWIS QUILTS WHEN PURSE IS CUT

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 23.—Because Ed (Strangler) Lewis, former heavyweight wrestling champion of the world, refused to sign articles for a match with Stanislaus Zbyzsko, present title-holder, a wrestling bout, scheduled between them here for Monday night has been called off indefinitely.

Lewis claims he was not given a fair show in the division of the purse. Zbyzsko was to be guaranteed $12,000 or forty per cent of the total gate receipts, while Lewis was to receive forty per cent of the balance.

FIELD MARSHAL WILSON REFUSES TO VISIT ULSTER

LONDON, June 23.—What purported to be a copy of a letter Field Marshal Sir Henry Hughes Wilson, chief of the imperial general staff, sent to Prime Minister Lloyd George, giving his reasons for not accepting the premier's invitation to attend yesterday's opening of the Ulster parliament was circulated today in Irish quarters here.

The field marshal's reasons for declining to go to Belfast were given as follows: "Being the senior officer of the British army, I do not think it right or proper for me to be present. In view of the fact that the government is determined to increase its pressure on the south and west of Ireland to bring the Sinn Fein rebellion to an end, and that orders for all troops to go over will emanate from me, I think, perhaps it would bring politics into the army, if as preliminary to ordering thousands of troops over to crush the rebellion, I was seen to take part in the opening of the north, ern parliament."

The copy of the letter was printed in the Irish Bulletin.

BANK OF ENGLAND SPRINGS SURPRISE REDUCING DISCOUNT

LONDON, June 23.—The Bank of England sprang a surprise upon the money market today by reducing its rate of discount one-half of one per cent to six per cent just as the banks were making up their half yearly accounts. This will mean a great deal of extra work in altering the rates of interest and it was expected that during the day the deposit rates will be lowered.

It had been thought that the Bank of England would abstain from any reduction in the rate pending the settlement of the labor troubles, and it is believed the chief reason for the decision to lower the rate was the necessity that the treasury be able to borrow money more cheaply.

The recent reduction of the federal reserve bank rate in the United States and cheaper money conditions in America were also guiding influences to the lower minimum rate.

The effect of the reduction was immediately seen in the stock market, where fair sized orders were placed in the gilt edged section for war loans, Indian stocks, Argentine fours also bonds. The market also hardened in other sections.
