

BEVAN PARTY IS SWINDLED, WIRE HOME FOR CASH

A party of well known Medford people who left here two weeks ago on an auto trip to southern California, and expected to arrive back home today are sadly marooned at Salinas, Calif., about 150 miles or so south of San Francisco by a court case through a bad man having given Arthur C. Bevan, leader of the party, a bum check for injuries sustained to the Medford car after he had bumped into it.

Local folks familiar with Mr. Bevan's Ford wonder how it could possibly have been injured more than a couple of dollars worth no matter how bad the accident. Be that as it may the Medford party wired home for money to keep them alive until after the court trial, and won't appear hereabouts for about a week.

In the party are Mr. and Mrs. Bevan, Misses Natalie and Ruth Hamilton and James Campbell, sometimes called Jimmie. They had the time of their lives on the trip and everything was going great until the wicked man bumped into the car. At Los Angeles they were the guests of the Kentner family, former prominent residents of Medford.

When the bump came the former Canadian war veteran went over the top for the first time since early in the world war and bawled the offending driver out so vigorously in Princess Pat regiment style, that the latter warmly apologized and further, at once drew a liberal check in payment for damages inflicted on the Medford car. This check was soon afterward found to be worthless, and resulted in Arthur and Jimmie, aided by the others causing the villain's arrest. There are often vexatious delays in courts, and the Medford party can not start for home until the case is disposed of.

They were running out of funds, hence the passionate pleas wired home for financial aid. This appeal had a tremendous effect on the local California-Oregon Power company's staff—touched their hearts so much that they contributed to a fund to send a telegram of condolence and good advice.

GARDNER'S CAPTOR WILL GIVE MONEY TO WIFE

CENTRALIA, Wash., June 25.—Patrolman Louis Sonny, who placed Roy Gardner, escaped mail bandit, under arrest a week ago, stated today that any reward he receives will be turned over to Mrs. Gardner, who is in California.

"Mrs. Gardner needs the money, and I will turn it over to her," Sonny said.

The patrolman expects to get only $50 for making the capture, the other

NEW DIRECTORS TRIGONIA WELL, DOWN 1300 FEET

The Trigonía well is now at approximately 1300 feet. The drill for the last 25 feet has been in hard black lime, with an occasional break of thin strata of slate. The gas pressure appears to be increasing, and there is a constant show of good live oil.

The well had a large number of visitors during the week, all of them were enthusiastic over the showing of oil and gas. The crew will not work Sunday.

As previously announced, the stockholders election for board of directors took place the 20th inst., and re-elected the old members, and added 4 more, making a total of 11 in all. The old members are C. E. Gates, chairman, Charles Lilly, W. N. Campbell, E. W. Liljebran, S. I. Brown, Chris Gottlieb, Sylvester Patterson.

The additional members are Judge E. E. Kelly, W. C. Moore, J. D. Bell, Fred L. Champlin.

COURT HOLDS MARRIAGE LEGAL

Nearly one month later, on April 16, 1920, after Miss Pickford and Fairbanks were married, Fowler filed an action here asking that the decree be set aside "in the interests of the state of Nevada." He charged Moore and Miss Pickford with "fraud and collusion," declared Judge Langan had no jurisdiction in the case, as both principals resided in Los Angeles, said the decree was "colorable," said the principals held the Nevada court in "utter contempt" and charged that the marriage of Miss Pickford and Fairbanks was part of a "fraudulent plan conceived by the defendants." Moore, he alleged, came to Douglas county solely to submit to service of the summons. The attorney ney general's action was predicted, he declared, on the principle that the state reserves interest in all divorce cases.

COMPERS RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT

vention for "expressing itself on this issue and rest content with its decision."

Rising slowly from his presidential chair after his election had been announced, and after scores of delegates had repeatedly shouted "speech, speech," Mr. Gompers motioned for silence.

"I can't begin to tell you how gratified I am at the result of this election," he declared. "This is the first time in my official career in the labor movement that I have expressed myself in such language, for as a matter of fact, whatever honor has come to me—whatever confidence has been placed in me I have interpreted it as a call to duty. It is little gratification to me to have defeated Delegate Lewis," said the labor chief.

Gompers' Large Brain.
"When the street railway and electric employees were organizing in Indiana," said Mr. Gompers, "a friend of mine, Delegate Callahan, of New Orleans, and I were walking down the street and the delegate said to me, 'Gompers, I'm disappointed in you. I inquired why and the delegate said, 'because I thought you were such a big man, at least six feet tall. You write so largely. You talk so largely and have such a large brain.'"

And I want to say that I intend to do that. Whether I have a large brain or not you must judge. But when I speak I shall not speak in any minor key. I will speak out for the demands labor makes for its services without which society would come to a standstill.

"I will not speak in a minor key, no matter if it be to president, cabinet officers, senators or even to daily newspapers. The voice of labor, I will try to speak, and come what may, I will take the consequences, I prefer the characteristic of boldness to any other."

Sketch of Gompers.
DENVER, June 25.—The history of Samuel Gompers is largely the history of organized labor. Since 1881, with the exception of one term, he has been president of the American Federation of Labor, which he was largely instrumental in organizing.

Friends of the veteran labor leader say he is the most active man in the United States, despite his 71 years. He traveled an average of 100 miles a day during 1920, one trip being made by airplane to keep an engagement. Hardly a meal is eaten without a conference going on simultaneously and at times he has dictated statements as he ate.

During the past year he has written four books and fifty pamphlets. Another book is in the hands of his publishers.

Throughout the war he was active in preventing strikes and assuring labor co-operation in war work. Twice he visited Europe, making speeches in behalf of the war and participating in the peace conference. The slogan, "no peace without victory," is credited to Mr. Gompers. He was chairman of the labor commission of the national council of defense during the war, president of the American alliance for labor and democracy and chairman of the commission on international labor at the peace conference.

Married in April.
In addition to his administrative work as president, Mr. Gompers edits the American Federationist, a monthly publication, directs labor's efforts to obtain favorable legislation at Washington and keeps in touch with labor activities throughout the country.

With the exception of this year and in 1884, when John McBride, a mine worker, was elected president, Mr. Gompers has had virtually no opposition for re-election.
He married Sophia Julian of New York early in life. After her death he married Mrs. Gertrude Gleeves Neuschler, of Zanesville, Ohio, in April of this year.

Born in England, Mr. Gompers came to America when 13 years old. Working as a cigar maker, he organized an international cigar makers union in 1864 and was secretary and president for six years.

It was in connection with this work that he became interested in the larger movement which resulted in organization of the federation.

Gompers Nominated

The first name submitted as a candidate for the presidency was that of President Samuel Gompers, who was nominated in an eulogizing speech by George Perkins of Chicago, president of the cigar makers' union.

A demonstration of several minutes greeted the announcement of Mr. Gompers' name by Mr. Perkins at the close of his address. A number of delegates jumped to their feet and cheered but scores of others remained quietly in their seats, averting a stampede in behalf of the veteran labor leader.

Mr. Perkins commended the veteran labor leader as a man "with wonderful intuition, wonderful faith, of matchless knowledge, fearless courage, who took a rope of sand and made it the strongest and most formidable economic movement in the entire world."

"Under his fearless leadership you have no cause for fear from the open shop movement and other hostile drives," declared the speaker, adding: "No man in the United States is more lied about and abused than the president of the American Federation of Labor. Why? Because this man has accomplished something. He has shown incomparable and wonderful ability and constructive force."

Perkins declared that Mr. Gompers was physically able to perform his duties despite reports to the contrary.

In closing he submitted Mr. Gompers' name as that of "successful and fearless leader."

John L. Lewis Nominated
When William Green, secretary of the United States Mine Workers mounted the platform to nominate John L. Lewis, he was given an enthusiastic ovation.

"Under the splendid leadership of this great leader," Mr. Green declared, "his organization had made wonderful progress that speaks for itself."

"Through the present industrial depression, under his leadership, the United Mine Workers has retained its wage scale and no recession made."

Defending the action of the miners' chief in "bowing to the government," in the coal mine strike of 1919, Mr. Green declared that Lewis had shown "courage, wisdom and judgment in meeting this crisis."

Deuels'

"If we had opposed the government, the government would have run over our union and instead of being here today as proud delegates there would only be a remnant of our organization left."

"It requires more moral courage to meet such a crisis, and make a decision though the heart rebels against the force that carries you on."

"I submit to you the name of a candidate—you know him and his peculiar qualifications, a man who has been tried and never found wanting," said Mr. Green, formally placing Mr. Lewis' name in nomination. He was mildly greeted as he left the platform.
