

PEACE IN IRELAND IS EXPECTED

Ireland Confident De Valera Will Accept Lloyd George's Proposal for Conference—New Spirit Discerned in British Government—People Are Sick of Strife.

LONDON, June 27.—(By the Associated Press)—Belief that Eamonn DeValera, "president of the Irish republic," will accept Premier Lloyd George's invitation to come to London for a conference with the government and Premier Craig of Ulster designed to bring about a settlement of the Irish problem, is expressed in the majority of reports reaching this city from Dublin.

Lloyd George's invitation caused profound sensation in Dublin. Sources predicting that DeValera will accept are agreed that he probably will attach sharp conditions to his acceptance, one being that more binding guarantees than were contained in the premier's letter must be given for the safe conduct of certain other Irish leaders and that he would insist upon release of republicans now interned or imprisoned in order that they might accompany him. It was pointed out that the wording of the premier's letter would make it impossible for him to refuse such a demand.

Significant Change.
The prime minister's letter was regarded here as indication of a remarkable and significant change in the attitude of the British premier.

In the event that DeValera refuses the premier's invitation, it is generally believed that the government will make energetic preparations for a vigorous campaign to suppress Sinn Fein activities.

Troops which could be used for this purpose are constantly arriving in Ireland and extension of martial law to all of Ireland except Ulster is known to have been considered for some time.

Moderate Sinn Feiners are represented as being extremely anxious that DeValera accept the invitation. They can see no possibility of ending that conflict under present conditions and they fear terrible results if an intensified military campaign is begun as a result of rejection of Lloyd George's overtures, it is declared.

A Workable Plan.
An authority anonymously quoted by the Daily Mail in dispatches from Dublin declared that peace would be possible if the British government agreed to permit Ireland to govern herself excluding only matters pertaining to foreign relations, the army, navy and of strategic considerations and if the six northern counties were granted by the rest of Ireland such measures of self-government as DeValera has indicated his willingness to concede, within the limits of an autonomous Ireland. Such a settlement, however, this authority pointed out, would involve abandonment of the demand for complete independence and might for that reason be repudiated by the extremists.

BELFAST, June 27.—In a message from Paris, where he is acting for the Irish republican interests, Sean O'Ceallaigh, member of the Irish republican parliament, says: "Mr. Lloyd George's invitation to explore the possibilities of a settlement will undoubtedly receive the consideration of President DeValera and the Irish cabinet."

The unionist newspaper, Northern Whig, takes exception to Premier Lloyd George's attempt "to draw Ul-

SOCIALIST FOR STRIKE, EVENT ANOTHER WAR

Resolution at National Convention Calls for Gathering of All Radicals to Prevent Future Wars by General Walk Out.

DETROIT, June 27.—A resolution inviting all radical organizations of the United States to a conference next year to form an alliance to prevent future wars by the threat of general strikes was introduced in the socialist national convention today.

The Wisconsin delegation is sponsor for the move and Mayor Daniel Hoan of Milwaukee introduced the resolution. It would invite the farmer-labor party and various labor unions, including the mine workers, machinists and some of the railroad groups to participate.

The resolution proposes a program of four points: Opposition to war. Restoration of political liberty. Collective ownership and democratic control of instruments of production monopolistically owned. Agreement to use both political and industrial means to this end.

By agreement of the mine and railroad workers to call a general strike in event of war, future conflicts can be prevented, Hoan declared.

The resolution was offered as a substitute for pending motions dealing with political and general strikes and the party attitude toward labor.

SOCIETY BASED ON MONEY ALL WRONG, FORTUNES STOLEN, SAYS HARVARD GRADUATE WHO REFUSES SECOND MILLION

Youthful Idealist Spurns Offer of Another Fortune, Preferring to Live Simple Life and Allow Mother to Support Him—Why Work for Money, When World Has Too Much?

BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., June 27.—(Special.)—"Heaven forbid that I be offered a third million," said Charles Garland, Harvard graduate, who has just rejected a second fortune of $1,000,000 from the estate of an uncle. "But if I am I will turn it down just as emphatically as I have the other two already bequeathed me."

"A society based on money is the wrong kind," continued the young man, who first started a money-mad world by refusing a fortune of $1,000,000 from his father's estate. "All the evils of the world spring from the greed of private possession—from the desire of one man to have more than another. The real things, the ideas and ideas, cannot be bought and paid for."

Happy as Barefoot Farmer.
Garland today told in detail why he is happier as a barefoot, comfortable country farmer than he possibly could be if he owned the bank of England.

Barefooted, his feet tanned almost black by sun and exposure, he divided his time between wedging a bolt in the handmade road and cranking the engine of a hand-made traction machine on his mother's magnificent country estate here.

And as he manipulated various levers of the traction engine with his naked feet, Garland, sturdy farmer and idealist, expounded his reasons why he has turned down two fortunes. The first was left him by his clubman father, James A. Garland; the second by Charles Tullen Garland, of England.

His wife shares his ideas, and Garland says she is a "perfect companion." When he wishes to work, he says, she dons breeches and overalls and helps him saw wood or hammer nails. When he wants to talk she listens. "She is content, he asserts, to be a "poor man's" wife, and not handicap her freedom by "stolen goods."

Stolen Goods, He Says.
"If I accept a fortune I'm stealing something that doesn't belong to me. And if I give money away I'm helping someone receive stolen goods that will do him harm. Money never did anyone any good. I never could do any good with money."

"Men become great by following their ideals, not by following the lure of wealth. Money kills idealism. Christ preached this. I am a professing Christian."

"If I have something others need I'll give it to them. And if they have something I need I'll take it; but not on a money basis. If I want to eat I'll plant my foodstuffs and build an engine to reap them. Then I'll produce what I need and not robbing anyone."

Daughter May Decide.
"When my little three year old daughter grows up she may accept a fortune if she wishes. And she may go through the phases of a college education if she chooses. But I sha'n't force her, and I hope her self-education will show her the futility of wealth. I sha'n't contaminate myself or others by receiving or giving money."

And Garland is a very busy man. Sometimes he works all day. Sometimes he just sits in the garden and thinks.

Mother Supports Him.
While he declines to accept the fortune left him by his father, he is living on the bounty of his mother, now Mrs. Swinburne Hale. He frankly admitted to his interviewer that with his wife and infant daughter he had depended all winter on his mother for support.

All the while the money which Garland refused is guarded by the trustee—accumulating for the benefit of the baby daughter, who might now, but for her father's ideas, have many nurses, many toys and a rich nursery instead of a simple farm-house curio.

"My present desires are simple," he added. "I haven't any money in my pocket and don't want any." "Do you believe that your labor on the farm has repaid your mother for what she has spent on you?" Garland was asked.

This is his reply: "Has Produced His Share." "No, I don't figure anything of the kind. I feel sure my productive efforts for my mother haven't been equal to what my family and I have consumed. I have worked some of the time on a farm which a man leases from my mother. That labor hasn't brought her anything."

"I do believe, though, that my efforts toward society as a whole have anything."

IN JUNCTION AGAINST BIG FIGHT ASKED

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 27.—Clinton N. Howard, secretary of the international reform bureau, left here today for Camden, where he said he would appear before Vice Chancellor Leaning to seek an injunction to prevent the Dempsey-Carpentier fight at Jersey City, July 2.
