

TURKISH PRINCE WANTS U. S. JOB ROLLING CIGARETS

NEW YORK, July 1.—Here is a chance for any employer, anywhere in the United States, to obtain a guaranteed title—provided he can find space on his payroll for a genuine nobleman.

Applying at the Knights of Columbus American Service Bureau in Constantinople for a job, an ex-member of the Sultan's forces, claiming to be Prince Oshrah y Beni, of Abyssinia, thirty-one, unmarried (his harem was left behind in Abyssinia), says that he will make any American a Sheik who, in his own dignified words, "can honor me with a position in his concern that will provide maintenance in accord with my status."

The prince's present status consists of three square meals per day, with the corners knocked off. The only recommendation that Fred W. Milan, K. of C. supervisor, with whom the prince filed his application, gives the candidate for an American job is that he's expert at rolling the "makin's" for cigarettes. Still, if some American office boss yearns for the Asiatic distinction of Sheik, entitling him to wear purple pants, a shovel beard and a turban, the prince will oblige, if room can be found on the payroll.

HUMAN BEINGS WITH TAILS NOT RARE, SAYS DOC

LONDON, July 1.—"Children born with rudimentary tails are not so rare as generally supposed."

This startling statement was made by Professor Arthur Keith, a famous anthropologist, during a recent lecture which he delivered at the Royal Institution.

During the discussion which followed the lecture several doctors declared that they had had professional experience with children born with "vestigial" tails, and one physician stated that among the recruits he examined for the army during the war no fewer than eight grown men possessed this peculiarity.

"Huxley's verdict that man can claim no place apart in the animal world, but is actually a member of it in substance and structure remains unchallenged today," said the professor.

"I have devoted over thirty years to examining the problem of man's origin and have come to the conclusion that Huxley and Darwin have exaggerated rather than underestimated the structural gaps which separate man from his nearest allies. "Neither Darwin nor Huxley ever said or believed that man had arisen from the gorilla, the chimpanzee or the orang-outang. What they did say and what all anthropologists now believe, is that we must search for characteristics which man and the great anthropoids share to some distant ancestry which is common to both anthropoids and man.

"These apes do not represent a series of evolutionary jumps, culminating in man, but are end-branches from a common stock."

Below the Surface.

GRASS VALLEY, Cal., July 1.—Four hundred feet below the surface, a large log was found recently by workmen drilling a power plant tunnel at Caribou, on the Feather river, near here. The wood was said to be well preserved and not petrified.

Geologists state the wood was found in what at one time was a river bed on the west slope of the Sierra Nevada mountains. Some of these buried river beds have been found vastly rich in gold.

Precious stones were classed as male and female by the Romans, according to the darkness or lightness of their color.

WHAT TO CONSIDER WHEN YOU DECIDE TO BUILD A HOME

What are the important things to consider in selecting a plan for your home?

There is the location of your building site, its size, the number of people in your family, the climatic conditions, the availability of suitable and appropriate materials and probably the limits of your purse.

You want a plan to fit the needs and requirements of your family—a plan which provides modern conveniences, comfort, economic use of material, labor, plus interior and exterior attractiveness in design, finish and arrangement.

It's poor business to take a profit on your lot and lose money on your home just because your plan is nondescript and commonplace.

Be Sure of Plan

You owe it to yourself to be sure of your plan, because home planning is serious business—a business that will net you a profit or loss, depending upon the businesslike way you go about it. To build from a plan that you "guess will do" is poor judgment. It may prove a waste of good dollars.

Perhaps you have decided that the plan you select must build the home of your dreams. In this event, if you hope to find your "dream plan" already prepared, you are apt to be disappointed. If, however, you study these plans with open mind and the idea of finding one which combines the practical and convenient features to fit your needs, you are sure to discover a plan which will approximate your ideals and perhaps give you additional features and conveniences you have not counted on.

Mistakes Are Costly

It's wrong to get the notion that because you want a small home your plan doesn't deserve the same character and class of design supplied people who spend larger sums of money for bigger houses. This belief costs thousands of home builders thousands of dollars. They fail to understand that the experienced designer and architect, on account of his training and skill, is better able to know how to cut costs and get maximum results.

The whole idea in modern home planning is toward efficiency and labor saving without sacrificing comfort. The tendency is to reduce the size of rooms that require steps and labor in housekeeping. Bedrooms are smaller than formerly, but with more thought toward adequate ventilation and sunshine. Kitchens are smaller, to save steps. The living rooms are opened up and made larger.
