The Barnum hotel is a four-story structure, built in 1915 at a cost of $75,000, and was one of the newest of Medford buildings of any size. It is owned by J. C. Barnum, a pioneer of the city and valley, who originally built it for a hotel, but diverted it to an apartment house. He said "I have insurance on the building, but only half enough." His son, George said the exact amount of the insur-ance carried could not be determined until the policies were gone over. The work of rebuilding and re-pairing the hotel will commence as moon as the insurance adjusters have finished their work, which is expect-ed to take a week or ten days. Tele-grams were sent this afternoon ad-vising them of the blare.
