

FIND OIL WELL IN CELLAR OF SPOKANE HOME

F. W. Draper of Rosalia, Wn., who is in Medford with a view to permanently locating here, tells a strange oil story which whets the appetites of local oil men. He heard this tale and investigated it while visiting in Spokane recently, and carries with him a small bottle of the oil for which he paid 25 cents. Mr. Draper is a farmer and is not interested in oil ventures.

which was thought to be caused by a defective sewer. The city sewer department was notified and made repairs which it was thought would end the leakage. But the water continued to come out of the ground in the cellar and the city officials condemned the house for residence purposes.

Finally the owner of the house, after it had been vacant for some time, decided to live in it himself and did so. One day his wife desiring a fire in the stove brought up some coal from the cellar which had been saturated by the supposed sewer fluid. The fire had only burned a short time when the stove blew up. While a number of men were investigating into the cause of the explosion one of them, who happened to be an oil man, picked up a piece of coal and smelling it at once exclaimed, "Petroleum!"

His contention that the coal was saturated with petroleum was ridiculed until an analysis of the fluid in the cellar was made, which developed that it was a very high grade of petroleum which had wonderful medicinal qualities. The owner of the house scooped a small hole out where the fluid came from the ground, and it soon filled with eight gallons of the oil. The hole was later enlarged to a 10 gallon capacity, and for some time the oil has found a ready sale at $8 a gallon. It is of such refined medicinal quality that it is a general cure-all, and finds a ready sale to alling people.

The owner of the property recently formed a company to develop this oil streak and hope for oil, and in the meantime the company has already a steady income from the sale of oil from the small pool at $8 a gallon.
