indications are strong that turkeys will be sold cheaper for Thanksgiving next week than for years past and that the price will be between 35 and 40 cents a pound, or less. Turkeys are reported plentiful in the valley.

There is utter stagnation in the turkey market at this time, the sales being practically too limited to quote as a rule," says the Portland Journal.

"Prices appear weak generally with both Seattle and San Francisco indicating that they expect low prices Thanksgiving and perhaps less during Christmas and New Years."
