

Local and Personal

The Christmas package sending business has just started to get into swing and both the local postoffice and the American Express company office report that whereas a few parcels were sent out on the previous days of this week, yesterday they had quite a number for eastern and middle west points which bore the warning admonition "Do not open until Christmas." All indications are that this year Medford people will send Christmas presents to relatives at distant points much earlier than usual. No incoming Christmas parcels have been received in the city, but they will begin to arrive next week and gradually increase in volume until Christmas day.

The series of liquor raids being conducted in Klamath Falls by the sheriff and the policemen of that city has created crowded conditions in the city jail where 29 county and federal prisoners are confined, mostly on liquor charges, necessitating the placing of bunks on the floor. The possibility of still more prisoners coming in following the present session of the grand jury has placed the authorities in a quandary. "One solution would be a municipal rock pile, the sheriff believes, his theory being that the prospects of making little ones out of big ones would go far to discourage much petty law-breaking," says the Klamath Falls Herald.

Friends and relatives of girl students from Medford and vicinity at the O. A. C. are amused because they are tied up this week-end from all social affairs because of the final examinations. According to college rules, no social affairs may be scheduled the week-end preceding final examinations and Miss Mary A. Rulife, dean of women, has announced that the girls are not to have any engagements with men during the week-end. They may go to the moving picture shows with some of their fellow coeds if their work is up to date and complete. The honor board will handle any cases where a girl may be found to violate the ruling.
