The Jackson county Farmers' Week, or short course, will be held during the first week of January at the public library in Medford. Last year was the first Farmers' week ever held in Jackson county, and the event proved successful in every particular. It is the plan of the committee in charge of Farmers' Week for this year to make the school much better than that of last year. Several new features will be added. A full week will be devoted to such subjects as horticulture, dairying, farm crops, rodent control, poultry, and irrigation. Each subject will be given a full day.
