

FIRST LADY JUROR JACKSON COUNTY MRS. ELLA SMITH

The jury list for February term of the circuit court which meets Monday, February 17th, was drawn today by the county clerk, and Mrs. Ella Smith of Jutte Falls, a housewife, has the distinction of being the first woman drawn for jury service under the new law in Jackson county.

Three Medford women appear on the list: Miss Ruth Manning, clerk of the school board, and Mrs. Lucile Frohbach, wife of the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and Mrs. Maude A. Holman.

Out of a venire of thirty-one, eleven women were selected, as follows: (aside from above):

Lulu May Penland, Talent; Anna L. Langley, Jacksonville; Luella Applegate, Ashland; Alice B. Swindonburg, Ashland; Isabel Baer, Ashland; Mary E. Kleinhammer, Jacksonville; and Mary A. Price, Talent.

It is not predicted by the county clerk's office that many of the women selected will serve, as that office has been flooded with phone calls announcing in a feminine voice that they would not serve. Under the law, service may be waived upon the signing of a blank, which will be presented by the sheriff when he serves notice officially they have been selected.

The men drawn for service on the same list are:

Fred L. Champlin, Gold Hill; Cliff L. McInney, Ashland; C. C. Hamilton, Central Point; E. A. Fleming, Jacksonville; C. W. Fraley, Ashland; Ray Offensbacher, Euch; R. L. Damon, Medford; Louis Tucker, Ashland; H. R. Lambkin, Ashland; H. F. Platt, Medford; R. H. Childers, Medford; J. H. Atwell, Medford; Nels Erickson, Ashland; Kenneth C. Beebe, Central Point; Bruce C. Beckett, Medford and H. L. Carlton, Prospect.

QUEER FEELINGS AT MIDDLE AGE

Women Should Know How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helps at This Trying Period

Sheboygan, Wisconsin.—"I was run down, tired and nervous, I could not even do my own housework, could not sleep at night and all kinds of queer thoughts would come to me. Finally I gave up going to the doctor and a friend told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After the first bottle I could sleep better and I have kept on improving ever since. I have taken seven bottles now and am so happy that I am all over these bad feelings."—Mrs. B. LANSER, 1639 N. 3rd St., Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

For the woman entering middle age Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound can be of much benefit. During this time of life certain changes take place which sometimes develop into serious trouble. Melancholia, nervousness, irritability, headache and dizziness are some of the symptoms. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a natural restorative, especially adapted to assist nature in carrying you safely past this time. Why not give it a fair trial?

W. O. W. Banquet Tomorrow Night

J. O. Wilson

The W. O. W. has another big meeting tomorrow night. Medford Camp No. 90 has their third annual roll call at which time Head Manager J. O. Wilson of Portland will be the guest of honor. Neighbor Wilson is one of the leading fraternalists of today and ranks high as an orator and authority on fraternal insurance.

Grants Pass is coming down 100 strong to put on the work.

Medford camp now has over 450 members and are still growing. A big time is assured for tomorrow night followed by a banquet.

HARDING FIRMLY OPPOSED TO NEW TAXES FOR BONUS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—President Harding is unalterably opposed to the enactment of the special taxes suggested to finance the soldier bonus or to the return to taxes which have been repealed. It was stated officially today at the White House.

It was indicated that the executive was very much in doubt if it would be possible to raise the revenue to finance the cash feature of the bonus under an issue of bonds without appreciably advancing interest rates and destroying the financial tranquility which is sought.

The president, it was said, was disposed to be favorable to the bonus but his attitude was that of finding some substantial means for the fulfillment of promises made on one hand without disturbing the desired return to financial stability. It was stated that Mr. Harding's attitude on the bonus question would be made clear to congress in a communication expected to be sent to the senate and house sub-committees dealing with the bonus subject. Whether this letter would go forward today was not disclosed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The question of how the soldiers' bonus should be financed was still under consideration by President Harding today and was understood to have been brought up at the regular cabinet meeting. A decision was expected soon, perhaps later in the day. At the capitol it appeared that sentiment was growing in favor of an issue of short time treasury notes of about $800,000,000 over the 30 months' period beginning January, 1923.

LINCOLN BANQUET BEST EVER

dent, Mrs. Gordon McChesney of Ashland, second vice-president, Mrs. Helen Gale of Medford, secretary, Ben Herring of Central Point, treasurer, B. E. Harder of Medford.

A striking feature of the banquet was the beautiful decorations, the prettiest and most artistic ever seen at a Lincoln club banquet, thanks to the genius of Tom Swain, who had transformed the great dining room into an enchanting ball chamber. The eye with many large and small flags, red, white and blue ribbon streamers, with here and there festoons of ivy. On the wall over the center of the speakers' table was hung a large picture of Abraham Lincoln framed in ivy against a brilliant flag background and resting on a mass of ivy, and on the wall in the rear center of the hall was a large picture of President Harding.

Interpersed throughout the program were selections by the Imperial orchestra and vocal solos by A. Andrew Walker. The invocation was delivered by Rev. Frederick R. Leach, and the banquet ended with the singing of America by the assembly. The banquet ended by 11 o'clock, and thus the ambition of Postmaster Vining was realized, although the program was not skimped in any way, but things were kept moving all the time. The excellent table service by the hotel management added in bringing this about. Landlord Mehr also won much commendation with the splendid food served.

Other Notable Features.
Striking features of the banquet program were the reading of Lincoln's Gettysburg address by Judge Wm. M. Colvig, reciting of original selections by Dick Posey of Ashland, and the resolutions adopted by the assembly over the death of the late Colonel H. H. Sargent of Jacksonville, one of the founders of the Lincoln club, which were read by Gus Newberry.

Judge Colvig, himself a veteran of the civil war did not read the famous address, but recited it most impressively, and prefaced the recitation with a brief description of the battle of Gettysburg and the circumstances under which Lincoln came to make the memorable address.

Dick Posey, the James Whitehead Riley of the valley, and whose original compositions at the annual Lincoln club banquets, in their humor and homely philosophy, are always his laughter producing hits, varied his program this time, first giving an imaginary telephone conversation by an old Negro with his master in which some local political hits were brought in. As an encore he recited a poem of much feeling which he had written during the world war, but which he had never recited in Medford before. The speaker explained that he had had no time in which to prepare any new poems for the banquet.

The only state official present at the banquet was Sam Koser, secretary of state, who made a few brief remarks expressing his pleasure at being present, and in extolling the life and influence of Lincoln.

Susanne Holmes Address.
The only woman speaker on the program was Susanne Holmes, county superintendent of the Jackson county schools, who told of holding Lincoln in veneration since her childhood days, especially because of her grandparents having lived in the old Springfield, Ill., home of the Lincoln and being acquainted with Lincoln.

Miss Holmes spoke of the changes in woman's garb since the time of Lincoln, and said that women with their new dress and intellectual freedom since the sixties, and their vote, are now beginning to realize their advantages and opportunities and strive for the higher and better things which they have long desired. A delicious humor pervaded Miss Holmes' remarks.

Among the greetings by telegram or letter read at the banquet were characteristic ones from Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, Senators Chas. L. McNary and Robert N. Stanford, Governor Olcott, R. A. Booth of the state highway commission, Judge Henry McGinn and Wallace McCann of Portland, Fred Williams of the state public service commission, Will G. Steel of Eugene, a charter member of the club, and Colonel R. C. Washburn, now of Portland, who in previous years was a conspicuous figure at the local Lincoln banquets.

Prof. Bissett's address in part follows:

Bissett's Eloquent Address
"Loyalty to truth in all things, that was Lincoln's ruling motive. The urge of a great ideal was ever active in his heart, crowding his brain and glowing from his eyes. Loyal to himself, loyal to his family, loyal to man, loyal to the union, loyal to God, Lincoln was loyal to the constitution of the government. He was honest in his interpretation of it, and the destiny that shapes our ends made him the author of another proclamation of freedom of higher import still.

"Groups of men assembled to compose the Magna Charta, the Declaration of Independence and the constitution of the United States. Lincoln alone without advice, conceived, brought forth and established the Emancipation proclamation, the religion of free labor, a document of such inherent force as to crowd out the lie in the declaration confirmed in the constitution which, while proclaiming all men born free and equal, yet made provision for the ownership of men in the states where slavery already existed.

"Then sounding a still loftier note, he gave voice to the Gettysburg address which proclaimed the freedom of all men, high and low, rich and poor, white, red and black, from the shackles of selfishness, leading them to move like gods in a world of universal helpfulness. Of all those who achieved distinction by the popular vote of the people, Lincoln is in himself the best example of freedom. Men generally are owned by their material possessions or by their desires for sensual gratification.

Division Again Threatens

"Today the union that Lincoln loved and did so much to preserve is again on the borders of division, with the same class consciousness appearing under a different guise, but scarcely less threatening than that which brought on the great struggle of 61-65. Men in great numbers have surrendered their freedom of will to do right, to their disposition to accumulate material things. Men of superb intelligence, captaining corporate industries, like McCellan with his army before Washington, are ever greedy for the enlargement of the thing they control, but more and more showing to the people their inability to move the colossal machine to any degree of harmony or public advantage.

"Labor unions founded on the principle of general brotherhood, have likewise become like the ambition of McCellan, always crying for more guns, more munitions, more rations, and better equipment but turning them to no constructive account. Between those two great groups, highly organized, glowering upon each other with growing apprehension, are the great plain people who are hardly considered in the problem.

"What would Lincoln say to this state of affairs, were he to return to contemplate it? Would not his wisdom and universal sympathy for all men prompt him once more to appeal for patience and mediation. Would he not proclaim again his belief in the people, his scorn of class consciousness. Would he not plead with men to lift their eyes above material possessions, to draw inspiration from the sun that shines and the rains that fall alike on rich and poor, cultured and ignorant.

If Lincoln Lived Now

"Lincoln above and beyond all men would teach these contending forces that the joy in life is in giving, the enthusiasm of life is in serving, and the highest glory which can be reached by man is the attainment of self abnegation; tableland of universal brotherhood where buying and selling, work and wages, shall have been converted into the Divine sacraments of human fellowship, where men shall not be enemies, but brothers—where class consciousness shall disappear, and the universal hymn of humanity shall be, 'with malice toward none and charity for all.'" the shooting and bombing in Belfast yesterday.

The British government is vitally concerned over the latest developments and their possible effect upon the home of commons. Many conservatives who hitherto have supported the government's Irish policy in the interests of peace are said to be losing faith in the prospect of a settlement and may withhold support of the bill establishing a free state when it comes to the second reading Thursday.

Lord Carson planned to raise the subject of the Clones shooting and other matters concerning Ireland in the house of lords today.

Four of the children wounded in yesterday's bomb attack in Weaver street died in the hospital during the night. Twenty-two persons were wounded by the missile but 13 were sent home after hospital treatment.

William Waring, a caretaker of Orange hall in Clifton street was shot in the neck today and is in a serious condition.

A truckman leading a horse through Clifton street, near the scene of the Waring shooting was stopped by a man who fired point blank at him, wounding him in the abdomen. He is in a critical condition.

The police today were again patrolling the troubled districts in armored cars. The majority of the shops along North Queen street have suspended business.
