Klamath county wool growers are observing with growing optimism the return to normalcy of wool prices and are slow to accept the offerings being made at Klamath Falls of 20 cents on contracts with $1 a head cash in advance for the season's crop. At this time last year no offers were being made, and the top price for the season was 16 1/2 cents. Because of the present low price of hay, which was sold down to $3 and $4 a ton, and in some instances $2, 20 cents is considered better than the 50 cents paid during the war. # JANUARY HEAVIEST IN APPEALS FOR RED CROSS HELP

The work of the past month at the Red Cross rooms has been of the heaviest of the year, owing to the lack of labor to be secured and the severity of the weather. It is reported that many workers have been attracted here by advertisements only to be disappointed when arriving.

The appeals of the current month are also heavy and constant, but no relief can be given owing to the lack of funds. Doubtless at no time in the history of the city has the needs of the poor been so great as at the present time. The co-operation of everyone is required to carry the city over this trying period.

Mrs. Mears had entire charge of the office work last month and confined the activities almost entirely to ex-service men, help being given only to those carrying discharge papers. Her report for the month embraces the following interesting statistics:

Number of meals given soldiers, 44. No. of beds given soldiers, 24. Medical care given to 4. Sent to hospital, 3. Letters written for soldiers, 12. Clothing contributed, 6 garments. Also visits made, affidavits secured, etc. In the civilian relief, there were nine family groups dealt with and four women placed in permanent employment. Ninety-four garments were given out, and many forms of help and assistance given.
