"The Bell Hop"

Wm. De Mille's dramatic feature with JACK HOLT, LOIS WILSON and CANRAD NAGEL

TO the mother he is still her "baby," this boy who would be a man! Through the mud she drags herself to stop him! His every instinct fights for revenge in this strange mountain feud, which cripples his brother and kills his father.

"DON'T, Davy, don't! It is the cry of a mother's heart. "You're all we got." His Mother is right. She must not be left alone to go to the poorhouse. But won't folks think him a coward?

A SOB heaves in his chest * * * rebellious tears stream over his cheeks * * * he is crying like a baby * * * he throws an arm across his eyes * * * he stumbles away * * * This but faintly sketches the Saturday Evening Post story by Joseph Hergesheimer, "Tol'able David," of simple, human, homespun men and women of the Virginia mountains.
