The latest information from Crater National park received in Medford by Superintendent Alex Sparrow this morning from the park ranger on duty there was that there was 16 feet of snow at the lake rim, 12½ feet at government camp, 11 feet at Anna Spring camp, and 7½ at the south or Klamath entrance. While this is a much greater depth of snow than in the park last year at this time Superintendent Sparrow says it is about the normal average.

A rock about two inches in diameter crashed through the plate glass window of the Medford Book store on North Central avenue this morning, and shortly afterward a man rushed in and told the occupants of the store that the rock had popped from the tire of a passing auto, the driver of which remains unidentified. The rock which was formerly one of low station and which was to have been used in remodeling operations on the Medford National Bank building, has risen and now nestles artistically between a blotter and in ink well, parts of the desk set on display in the window. The hole in the window caused by the entrance of the rock is four or five inches in diameter, and a crack extends from each side of the hole to the edges of the window pane. None of the articles in the window were damaged.

"The World's Champion" Has Punches

Wallace Reid is playing one of the best roles of his screen career, in "The Champion," his new picture showing this week at the Rialto theatre. The production is not lacking in punch inasmuch as the star plays the role of a young man who becomes the middleweight champion of the world and whips the rival who worsted him in a flatic encounter before he learned the fighting game. Lois Wilson is the girl and other noted favorites are in the cast.

Service men and a lot of others will enjoy the comedy feature on this program called "Oh, Promise Me."

Another sparkling comedy-drama was presented yesterday at the Page theatre, with Bebe Daniels, always a gay and dashing little figure, animating most of its scenes.

The play is called "One Wild Week," and is full of human interest, dash and heroism.

Frank Kingsley plays the leading masculine role. The rest of the supporting cast suggests that much overworked phrase, "all-star." It is truly an assemblage of players who are stars in their respective fields, and they add to the comedy with sharply-drawn characterizations. They are Maym Kelso, Edwin Stevens, Herbert Standing, "Bull" Montana, Frances Raymond, Carrie Clarke Ward and Edythe Chapman.

"One Wild Week" will remain for tonight and tomorrow matinee and night at the Page theatre, where other numbers on a good program are: "Baby" Peggy comedy, Pathe News and Gene Howard at the organ.

CALIFORNIA GETS COIN FROM LONESOME MAN

BISHOP, Inyo county, Calif.—Gold coins amounting to $1,585 were found recently in a tin can under the wooden step of the cabin of Jean Corbeau, of Lone Pine, near here who died a short time ago. The coins were in denominations of from five to twenty dollars and apparently had been accumulated over a long period of years.

In addition, Corbeau left an estate consisting of Liberty bonds and real estate. Having no relatives, Corbeau's property will revert to the state.

Another Leading National Advertiser Renews Contract

Fred C. Young of Seattle, district sales manager, and J. L. DeLong, of Portland, salesman, for Kellogg Corn Flake company of Battle Creek, Michigan, are in Medford this week on business. This popular firm's products are nationally known as quality products and sold and used all over the world. The company are great believers in advertising and are starting a new campaign in this paper to cover southern Oregon and northern California. They have carried ads with The Mail Tribune for years and the new and enlarged contract proves they find this paper a valuable advertising medium.
