Ye Smudge Pot

By Arthur Perry. A distinguished soldier of France came yesterday and was greeted by an outpouring of candidates for the legislature, and citizens familiar with the press accounts of his activities on the Marne in 1914.

The 28 snivel service workers who were fired by the president, never will get back in their swivel chairs. They are defended by Joseph P. Tumulty, former Goatsate of the Wilson reign, and now private secretary to the world.

WHERE IS MY WAYWARD CAT? (Cody, Wyo., Enterprise) TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: I hereby serve notice that I will not be responsible for food and shelter given to a brunette member of my household answering to the name of MILLIE. She left her bed and board some weeks ago. She has no sense of gratitude or morality, and if she persists in her wayward career will have to become a public charge. Jerome Kern.

To all outward appearances this is a fair, rare spring day. A handful of them will bring out the rolled sock, with the vivid garters. The new style enables the general public to be cognizant of them, without the wearer ignoring the running board to get into an auto.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Friends and Countrymen: At the behest of public opinion which cannot be denied, and with no thought of my own good, I have decided to make the run for Salem, on the following platform:

Conservation of the notch-tailed woodpecker and the wild life.

Free fishing outfits for piscatorial devotees.

Prune the parasites.

Abolishment of fattening grub, when eaten by the womenfolk.

Place parental control of kids in the hands of the police, and more use of the gallows when our youth misbehave.

Front pews for politicians 30 days before the primary.

More electric lights in the sparking zones.

Limit orators to four minutes, as during the Great Fracas.

More cordial relations with Morocco and the Near East.

Self mowing lawns for the boys, and self washing dishes for the girls.

Division of Rockefeller's wealth among my constituents.

I also promise to do all I can. Never double-cross a friend. Vote Your Answer, May 19th.

I am, Yours Anxiously, B. A. Putterer.

SOUNDS PLAUSIBLE

(Eugene Guard) Someone presumably hoboed broke into the bakery and Huston's meat market some time Sunday night. Some bread, cake, cookies and meat were missed. Someone probably had a feed.

The much predicted "Religious war" will be preceded by a number of preliminary battles to see which denomination will furnish the supreme commander. Many unregenerate sinners are so blinded by bigotry, intolerance and their own cussedness they cannot see the necessity of having a religious war, but righteousness will prevail.

FOR SALE—Pretty new spring suit, never worn, fine for high school girl, bought by mistake in Seattle. 336 N. High apt. 6.—(Salem Capital Journal). A member of the lowly klawges has one just like it.

A TIME FOR HARMONY.

IF NO other argument sufficed to restrain extreme partisanship in the United States, the grave political conditions existing everywhere in Europe and Asia ought to teach us the wisdom of maintaining reasonable harmony here to support prudent measures.

It is true that we elect men to office by the use of party machinery. But, once in office, we expect men to act for the good of the country and not as mischievous party politicians.

The Harding Administration is entitled to a fair four years' trial. It would be unfortunate to create a deadlock for the second half of Mr. Harding's term by pitting a Democratic Congress against a Republican administration. If the country wishes to reverse its verdict of 1920, it should wait until 1924 and sweep the Democrats into full power all along the line.

It is not necessarily a matter of reproach that Republican leadership has been unable to deal quickly and decisively with certain questions which did not admit of that kind of solution. The tariff question, for instance, has been so affected by the incalculable conditions of world production and exchange that there has been far better excuse for delay than there would have been for prompt legislation under the party lash.—Review of Reviews.

PUBLIC OPINION.

PUBLIC OPINION finds it as impossible to excuse the coal operators for vetoing an interstate conference with the miners as the New York public found it impossible last fall to excuse the cloak manufacturers for arbitrarily breaking off an agreement with the workers. Secretary Davis is right in saying that "the side that openly repudiates its written and signed obligations has crippled its case."

Why should the operators want to smash the United Mine Workers? They know that their industry is suffering from overextension; they know that an industry without effective labor organization is more likely to be overextended than one in which the unions can so far enforce a uniform wage standard as to shut out many weak producing units. The union officials sought too much in asking continuance of the present wage schedule, but it is evident from their willingness to confer that they were ready to accept a reduction. The operators hold that the only cure for an economically sick industry is a hard fight.—New York Evening Post.

THE OLD WAYS.

WHEN I was young my teeth would ache as though a record they would break. Then to the village dentist's chair in trembling haste I would repair. Some simple tools were on his bench, a crowbar and a monkey wrench, a pair of pinchers and an ax, a handsaw and a hunk of wax. He rolled his shirt-sleeves to his neck, and gave a yank and cried "By heck," and charged four bits and he was through—no scientific curves, he knew. Now to the dentist's chair I go, to be relieved of toothache woe. He has diplomas everywhere; he has a silver mounted chair, and instruments of every sort, and anaesthetics by the quart. He talks hygiene and kindred things, and antiseptic bunk he springs; and X-ray pictures of my fangs he takes while trilling his harangues; he tries out all the little tools indorsed by modern dental schools, and fools around and chews the rag, and finally he pulls the snag. I hand him then a big fat check, and leave his joint a nervous wreck. The old time dentist is a jest? Ah, well, I like his way the best; I'd rather have a blacksmith come and jerk a molar from its gum, than seek the dentist in his booth, who takes a day to dray a tooth.

COMMUNICATIONS

Collins Replies to Critics. To the Editor: I note from one or two articles in your paper that the matter of developing trade with Klamath is a live issue and if you will permit me I will mention one or two other matters in connection with marketing products grown in this valley.

To start with, permit me to say that neither I nor the firm I represent are interested either directly or indirectly in the sale of fresh fruits, berries, potatoes or perishable products of any kind, excepting as it affects the general prosperity of the country, nor do we own any real estate or operate any truck lines.

I am not particularly interested in the fact that Mr. Horn advises me that I am behind the times because I have had worse things said about me than that by experts and it does not take an expert to sell $300 worth of produce in Klamath in the course of a month. Nine hundred dollars a year is $75 a month and $75 worth of produce would not make enough salad to supply a second rate restaurant. The business is there in thousands, not merely nickles. The appetite is of the champagne variety and the only attempt to satisfy it that has been made from this end is on a not-very-near-beer basis. Nor do I appreciate his thanking me for advice I never gave him. I did not presume to advise anyone, although he presumes to advise me. I merely offered a suggestion of the possibilities of a market for products grown in this valley and if Mr. Horn was already aware of the matter contained in my article the article shouldn't interest him.

Nor am I particularly interested in the fact that Mr. Howell is apparently afraid of competition in the market that he (?) has discovered to the extent that he attempts to discourage other growers from investigating that market by stating that "Klamath at no time since the war has been able to handle near as the berries offered them by the berry growers of this valley." Mr. Howell states that he wishes to correct one statement that I made and then he proceeds to take issue with me on a statement that I never made. Quotation marks indicate a verbatim quotation and if Mr. Howell can show me where I ever made the statement he accredits to me, I will buy him a nice new summer bonnet, however, I will take issue with him on the statement that he made. At no time, neither before the war, during the war, nor since the war, has the Klamath demand for Rogue river valley berries ever been satisfied, excepting once last year when practically all the growers in this section, attracted by the higher prices offered for shipment to Klamath Falls by some of the Klamath Falls merchants who came over here, shipped their product there and left this market bare. Klamath was, for a few days, at that time, flooded with Rogue river berries but they were not in good condition and I believe if they had been they would have been taken up more readily. I was in Klamath at the time and know whereof I speak. The point I make is, that a greater demand can be created if the goods are delivered in first class condition.

To get back to the subject of marketing products, grown here. Last year we placed an order with the local cannery for 5,000 cases of tomatoes and string beans for delivery when packed, cash on delivery. At the time we placed this order, in March, we could have purchased our requirements from California or Utah at good prices but we held off in favor of the local pack. We received a total of less than 600 cases and we therefore had to go into the open market to supply our wants. California was sold up and we therefore shipped two carloads into this market from Utah and as a consequence consumers are today paying a higher price for Utah goods than local goods of equal or superior quality would have cost them and local growers and working men lost a large sum of money that they might have had. Anticipating that some will say that we did not offer a price large enough to make the growing profitable, we will state that the price made by the cannery to us was the opening market price and that the price the cannery offered the growers on tomatoes was $16 a ton as against Utah packers paying $8.

We are taking a chance again this year and have placed orders with Mr. Bullin for 5,000 cases at market opening prices and he advises us that he is offering $16 per ton whereas Utah is this year offering $7.50 to $8. We are wondering if we will get the goods.

For years past we have been selling vinegar, made in Hood River, the freight alone on which is 10c per gallon. At present we are shipping it from Eugene, the freight on which is 6c per gallon. We are selling dried apples from Hood River, prunes from the Willamette valley, dried peaches, red and white beans grown in California, but because we want to but because we have to. Maybe this is "real estate bouyanry gas" as Mr. Howell says, but I would call it carrying coals to Newcastle.

Attention is called to the above in the hope that perhaps some of the newcomers not the old timers, will be alert enough to take advantage of the situation that exists here. Let us hear from some of them.

Will Argue Baseball Before Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, April 6.—By strange coincidence the calendar of the supreme court, it developed today, calls for oral argument of a case vital to organized baseball April 12, the day designated as the inauguration of the major league season.

The proceedings which at that time will come up for argument were instituted by the Baltimore club of the defunct Federal league, which alleged it had been damaged to the extent of $200,000 by the failure of the Federal league, due to the activity of the major leagues.

Helped Her Mother Wonderfully

In these days of "flu," coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough, it is well to know that every year there are used more bottles of Foley's Honey and Tar than of any other cough medicine. Mrs. S. L. Sponge Up Evidence Against Bootleggers

LOS ANGELES, April 6.—The practice of dropping and breaking the bottle, followed by some bootleggers when about to be arrested, will become null and void if a new practice of the Los Angeles police proves as effective as its sponsors say it will.

It is merely sopping up with sponges the contents of bottles broken by bootleggers. They tried it out when they arrested Leon Esnault, taxi driver, charged with violating the Volstead act. He threw to the ground and broke a quart bottle. The police produced their sponges and obtained enough of the liquor which had been in the bottle to constitute legal evidence in court.

Pauline, portrayed by Bebe Daniels, is spending her last night tonight at the Page theatre.

At the Riatio Wallace Reid scored an emphatic hit in his latest picture, "The World's Champion," which was shown at the Riatio theatre yesterday. The play, filled as it is with romance, heart interest and thrilling situations which every ring fan will thoroughly enjoy, proved a powerful attraction if applause and laughter are a criterion. Lois Wilson is the leading woman and heads a strong supporting cast.

The "Christie forces have made a comedy, "Oh Promise Me," that has a novel appeal.

The action centers about a Post in Los Angeles and is full of action from start to finish. The service men and a lot of others will enjoy the burlesque of military ceremonies as practiced by the legion men in their ebullisms. Then the Armistice Day parade in Los Angeles is worked in. Evon Marshall Foch plays a part in the picture. This picture, announces Christie, was made with the co-operation of the American Legion post, and all the male members of the east are ex-servicemen.
