ILLEGITIMATE SON OF MILLIONAIRE IS GIVEN DAMAGES

JERSEY CITY, N. J., April 14.—Damages of $65,000 were awarded today to Vincent Earl Lembeck, 27, of Easton, Pa., by a jury in the Hudson county superior court which found he was the illegitimate grandson of the late Henry Lembeck, millionaire brewer, and entitled to a share in the estate. According to testimony at the trial, the plaintiff's mother, Mrs. Josephine DeCartier Coughlin, was employed thirty years ago as a cook in a residence near the Lembeck mansion. She became acquainted with the brewer's son, Victor, who is alleged to have entered into a common law marriage with her. Just before the child was born, Victor is alleged to have confessed that he already was married and to have pleaded with the woman not "to wreck his life." She went to Easton and raised her son, unknown to friends of the Lembeck family until the suit was filed a few months ago.

STORMY EASTER IN IRELAND EXPECTED

BELFAST, April 14.—(By the Associated Press)—A stormy eastertide in Belfast is predicted by those who have watched the progress of disorders here, as the result of a concerted attack on a patrol of special constables in Joy street last night. The patrol was making its rounds after the curfew hour when heavy firing from windows and roofs wounded four of the officers. The attack occurred in the Sinn Fein section. Further shootings although not believed to have been in the nature of reprisals, occurred today at the termination of the curfew period. All took place in Crumlin road, two miles from the scene of last night's affair. The first victim was a Protestant baker named Carmichael, who was assassinated while returning from work; the second, a corporation cleaner, Catholic, who was shot and is reported dying in the hospital, and the third a baker named Sloan, Protestant, who died in the street after being shot.

The WISHING FAIRY by Corinne. The Wishing Frog Fish or the Angling Fish. SNOOKUMS and Pimble had been ever so interested in Stella's account of how it is a cousin of the tiny Sea Horse, and of how both Mr. Pipe Fish and Mr. Sea Horse have pocket-books in which to carry their babies, and of how poor Mrs. Sea Horse and Mrs. Pipe Fish have no such pocket—such as Mrs. Kangaroo has. "I should think the mother Fish would feel awfully unhappy about having the babies always safer in their father's pocket than in her own," exclaimed Snookums. "Tell us, Stella, dear, can you think of any other queer Fish to tell about? It's lots of fun to hear of them!" The little Wishing Fairy did not answer for several moments, for she was thinking just as hard as she could think. "Yes," she replied at length. "I can tell you of just about the strangest Fish imaginable. You are now going to hear about the 'Wishing Frog'." "Oh," cried Pimble, in a disappointed tone. "I thought we were going to hear of a strange fish." "Well," laughed Stella, "and so you are. Even though it is called a Wishing Frog it is a Fish and it also is often called an Angler Fish. Here," and the Fairy stopped to pluck a blade of grass which in some magic way suddenly changed into a Fairy pencil. "I'm going to draw a picture of this 'Angler' so that you can see just what it looks like and how it in no way reminds one of a Frog." The two Brownies leaned over to have a good look while she was drawing. "This Angler Fish is a large creature from three to five feet long," Stella explained. "It has a big head and a short fat body ending in a long thin tail, and it is just about as ugly as anything could possibly be. Its mouth is simply huge, while its teeth are long, cruel and pointed and also movable!" "Movable?" exclaimed Pimble in amazement. "Do you mean to say that it can move its teeth?" "Yes," laughed Stella, "but it can't remove them! Well, to go on with my story. This Angler is covered with a naked skin—I mean by that, that it has no scales such as cover other Fish, but instead its skin is roughened with warts and bumps." "It is also very clever," "How is it clever?" asked Pimble curiously. "It's the same greenish brown color as the ground under the sea, and as it knows it, this is what it does to catch smaller Fish, which are what it eats—it stirs around and around and thoroughly muddles the water so that it can't be seen, then it shakes the long, thin, threadlike filament that extends up from the top of its head. (You can see it in the picture.) The passing Fishes see the shining tip of this filament waving up above the muddied water and, thinking it is something good to eat, come near it and are suddenly seized by the Angler." "That is how the Angler got its name. It angles or fishes for other Fish. It is also exceedingly greedy; Sometimes when hungry and this hungry thing grabs a Fish just as the Fish is about to grab the fisherman's hook and is hauled up hanging on to the Fish, and it won't let go until it is knocked on the head." "When fishermen hook an Angler they never throw it away, even though it is not good to eat; they save it because they know that when they cut open the stomach of this greedy little monster they are sure to find it quite full of freshly swallowed smaller fish!"
