DINNER CALL IS FATAL TO GUS NEWBURY'S TEAM

The spelling match of the Elks' lodge is now but a much confused memory, because of the rival claims made by the many contestants on both sides. Court Hall's side asserts that they won the victory, and Gus Newbury's side claim they still have their self respect and can look the whole world square in the face and tell their opponents of last night to make themselves scarce in a certain place. Instead of addressing themselves as brothers as usual the contestants in the spelling match are now using the words "scorpions," "robbers," and "fourflushers" in their fraternal conversation.

The end of the match came suddenly after a hotly contested fight. When six men were still standing on the Newbury side and three on the Hall side, successful strategy was used by the Hall men, who had been counted out, by circulating word quietly to the Newbury men still "alive" that lunch was being served in the basement. The Newbury spellers, as expected, stampeded at once for the basement expecting to grab a bite and rush upstairs again with it and get back into line again—all except their leader who did not get the lunch because it was his turn to spell out a word, and the word given him was an impossible one that no human being could spell.

Of course he flunked and was counted out, whereupon the gleeful Hall men unanimously claimed the match as they had three men standing, and not a Newbury man was in line.

The Newbury men also claim that the word announcer read out only words of double meaning to them to spell and in a foreign accent, while to the Hall men he gave out only simple words pronounced in purest English. The Hall men make counter charges.

The feeling is such that the respective spelling merits of each side is in doubt, including their leaders, and nothing will settle this dispute except a match to the finish "on the square" in the future, between a half dozen of the best spellers selected by Hall and Newbury from their respective sides.

Notice Policy Holders Western Union Life

I want to thank you for the confidence you have shown me, in giving the splendid business you have. I want you to know that I deeply appreciate it, and that no company can give you a better policy than you have in The Western Union Life. I want you to know that at all times I am ready and willing to render the same service that I have given my patrons the past nineteen years; a service which is so necessary in carrying an Insurance Policy.

I make the above-announcement because after May 1st, my sons and I will have the management of Northern California and Southern Oregon, with the same offices, for the Pacific Mutual Life, of Los Angeles.

This Old Line Legal Reserve Company, founded in 1868, needs no introduction, as its loans, investments and deposits here are near the half million mark, and are growing daily. They write all forms of both dividend and non-dividend bearing policies. Low cost, best service.

BARTLETT PEARS HURT BY FROST IN CALIFORNIA

George M. Pope, of Dennis, Kimball & Pope, is staying a few days at the Hotel Medford after spending six weeks in the various sections in California looking after the business interests of his firm. He reports that since arriving in the Imperial Valley, where his firm handles half of the grape output, that the weather has been very adverse to fruit advancement. The continuous cold weather has caused very material damage to the apricot crop, and has also hurt the Bartlett pears in the Sacramento and Salsun districts considerably, as well as the plums.

With business conditions improving in the east, Mr. Pope looks for a good pear and apple market all over the country. The export conditions are also very much improved on account of the advance in foreign exchange. It is a little too early to say what the eastern, Canadian or English crops of apples will be, but there is no doubt but that the apples from the Rogue river valley will continue to grow in popularity in England and the Scandinavian countries.

During the past season the storage in transit rate for pears has been put in operation, and this has been due largely to the efforts of Mr. Pope, who has worked on this deal for several years, and the railroad finally put it in their tariff last season, which gives pear shippers the privilege of storing their pears wherever they desire at a very slight additional cost, and giving them the use of a great many more markets which they were unable to use formerly.

Mr. Pope's stay in Medford will be curtailed considerably on account of the arrival in America of Mr. John W. Dennis, head of the firm of W. Dennis & Sons, Ltd., of London.

KLAMATH STRIKERS WIN DECISION

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., April 28.—The Oregon state conciliation board, in a statement issued here, has gone on record in favor of an eight-hour day in the lumber industry. The decision was the outcome of a hearing held in an effort to settle the lumber workers' strike.

The report, signed by William E. Woodward, Otto Hartwig and J. K. Flynn, said in part:

"To acknowledge that the eight-hour day is a mistake, that labor can not efficiently function nor industry be maintained on this basis, is to concede an error by a majority of the industrial leaders within our nation."

Extension of the working day to more than eight hours is an issue of the strike.

RED CROSS WANTS DISCARDED CLOTHING

Have you cleaned house yet? What are you doing with the things you will not keep another year? The Red Cross Thrift Shop wants them, and will renovate and put them into the hands of people who need them. Clothing, furniture, toys, books, pictures, dishes, fruit jars and ornaments. Do not throw things away. What may be useless to you may be the very things some one needs. Phone 456 and the Red Cross motor corps will call at your home to collect anything you have for the Thrift Shop.
