That the coming Rose Festival undoubtedly will be postponed for at least two weeks because of the backwardness of the season and lack of roses was virtually decided today when the festival officers received a telegram from Eric V. Hauser, president of the board, urging the postponement. Hauser, who is in Washington D. C., was asked by wire Tuesday night whether such a step would be desirable, considering the weather conditions. He was told the views of several Portland florists and rose growers, who reported that few rose buds have developed. Definite action in fixing a new date will be taken Thursday at a meeting of the festival board.—Portland Journal.
