The Spotless Town of Croatia

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 9.—A city which Croatians aspire to have added to the list of world capitals, judging from their efforts for independence, is told about in the following bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society:

"Zagreb, or Agram as it used to be known, sits in the lap of the Croatian hills and looks off across a fertile plain. The city is divided into three parts, one of which contains the Palace of the Banus, who under the rule of Austria-Hungary was the local administrator, and is reached by a funicular or by winding streets from the lower town.

A City of Scenic Beauty "Up from the railway station, almost to the main square of the city, there runs a fine Mall in the midst of whose lawns there are various fine public buildings and a little to the left, as one looks toward the hills behind the city, there are the beautiful grounds and buildings of the University of Zagreb, which is unsurpassed in all Jugoslavina.

"Zagreb has a fine museum in which one can see the lovely peasant costumes of Croatia, which, like those of Bohemia, Moravia and Slovakia, did much to give Austria-Hungary an enviable reputation as a museum of loveliness. Each region has its own pattern, some heavy with gold on black silk, others brighter with reds and yellows massed on white. Croatia is a picture-book land in which the distinctive dresses of the peasants form one of the main items of interest. The region of Zagreb has its own lovely costume. To see it at its best one must attend a market day in the great square named after Count Josef Jelacic, Croatia's most famous banus, whose part in the Croatian Revolution of 1848 won him the love of his fellows and the honors of Vienna.

"Except on market-day this great square is a drab, uninteresting place. Early in the morning on the days of the market long lines of tables are placed on the cobbles until they reach to the very tables of the coffeehouses along the southern side, and the country roads are alive with attractive figures, clothed in their holiday best, en route to the market.

Where "Roll Tops" Are Conventional "The waists and skirts of the women are of white, with much red embroidery up and down the front, around the waist and across the apron. Stout white hose with roll tops and ribbon garters fill in the space between the knee-length skirts and the moccasin-like slippers of soft leather. Around the head is worn the Slavic shawl, that form of self-beautification which reduces the high cheek-bones of the Slav to a pleasing oval that would honor a Madonna of Italy.

"The women are both vendors and shoppers. But many a sturdy wife is assisted by the presence of her picturesque man, whose costume is just as colorful as her own. His rather full white trousers are worn loose or strapped in at the bottom with the thongs which secure the sandals and his heavily embroidered shirt hangs down outside to a truly Slavic length. The yellow vest, with scores of bright buttons and gay stitching is likely to be worn unbuttoned, unless his shirt lacks ample decoration.

Attire is Blaze of Color "Almost always one is likely to see some of the Gypsies of the region and spattered with fire as is the white costume of the Croatian women, they seem lacking in color when a Gypsy woman strides by. Her head shawl is a blaze of Turkey red. The massive red flowers or other designs in her waist may or may not be carrying on silent war with the tone of the head-dress, but if by any chance they harmonize, the bright colors around the bottom of the apron surely do not.

"The Gypsy woman's main decoration, besides the bright rings of base metals which emphasize the proletarian quality of her hands, is a long necklace of the huge silver cart-wheel currency which bore the head of Francis Joseph and helped to make him popular throughout the now defunct empire of the Hapsburgs.

"Behind the city there are lovely valleys reaching into the hills and lived with singing brooks on their way to the Save, with pleasant peasant houses flanked by huge haycocks hiding in the trees, and along the ridges are scattered the cereas of suburbanites who love the air.

"Here too, is one of the finest wild parks in Europe, its vegetation untamed and full of beauty, with benches pleasantly located to look off across the city and the valley of the Save.

"But perhaps the prevailing impression of the visitor is not concerned with loveliness which nature has lavished on the surroundings but the way in which man has kept the place attractive. The tables of the coffee shops are as spotless as the white skirts of the women and as soon as the market is over, usually at noon, the cobbles of the street are polished till they shine. Every bench, lettuce leaf or plum pit is spirited away so that its presence may not add a touch of variety to the great gray square in which, but a few hours before, a thousand gaily dressed people surged back and forth in the eternal drama of barter and sale.

Constantly Fights Dirt "Out in the wide plain beyond the cathedral there is an amusement park or circus ground where the Croatian peasant follows his main delights of eating, drinking, singing and dancing. But with nightfall these colorful folks are well out on the white roads which lead to their farms, the woman toiling along under the large willow basket with the newly purchased goose rubber-necking from their elevated coign of vantage and the man, his brimless black felt hat, compromise between dunce-cap and derby, with its bright band around it perched over one ear, and his yellow vest, studded with small brass buttons until one can scarcely see the leather, flapping idly beside his care-free bosom. A veritable spotless town, Zagreb, emphasizes the labor of women in a way which reminds one of the electric sign in which a woman is constantly fighting dirt.

"At evening time the citizens invade the square which during the day has been crowded with country folk and the hundreds of little tables outside the coffee shops become centers of discussions which deal with everything from politics to love. Then slowly and silently they disperse and across the empty square there go a man and a maid, a figure in black and a figure in white. Her pretty head holds 'no heavy basket. Not a burden in the world has she. But against the black of the man's attire there are two spots of light. A narrow white mass marks the edge of her novel and like a great white chrysanthemum against his breast he carries her big white hat."

ROSE SHOW WILL OPEN WEDNESDAY OF NEXT WEEK

One of the most popular features of the Prosperity Week celebration next week will be the Rose Show which will be held under the supervision of the Greater Medford club. There is every indication that the roses will be their finest at the time of the show and those in charge of preparing the exhibition plan to make it one of the finest ever displayed in southern Oregon.

Special prizes will be awarded for the finest exhibits in various classes. The committee has urged that those wishing to cooperate in the rose show and to compete for a prize bring their roses as early as possible. While exhibits will be received up to 10:15 a. m. Wednesday, it would be practically impossible for the committee to furnish assistance in arranging the displays after 10 o'clock. All exhibits, whether in boxes or vases, are expected to be in place and ready for the judges at 10:30 a. m. At the time the officials of the show actually begin judging the various displays, exhibitors will be asked to leave the hall.

No person shall be allowed to compete as an amateur who sells rose plants, blooms or buds for budding, nor any person in the employ of a nurseryman. Any objection raised as to the rightful qualifications of any exhibitor shall be referred to the executive committee for arbitration, and their decision shall be final and binding on all parties. The exhibits of amateurs must not be staged or prepared for staging by trade growers or their assistants. Any person may have two or more exhibits in any class, but no exhibitor may take more than one prize in any one class. The same rose or roses cannot be
