SAMS VALLEY IS JUBILANT OVER THE LATE RAINS

SAMS VALLEY, June 9.—The late showers are bringing smiles to the farmers' faces as they are very beneficial to the crops at this time.

The prospects for a bumper crop throughout this community are very good. The late sown crops are a little behind but the recent rains are expected to bring them up to the average.

A large crowd from over the valley attended the funeral Monday of Douglas Morgan, whose death came as a sad shock to the community. Deep sympathy is extended the young wife and family through their sad misfortune.

Out of the four contestants for eighth grade diplomas in May but one was successful and owing to our school having had a smaller amount of schooling up to this date than most of the schools the pupils were granted permission by the superintendent to take the June examinations in full.

Mrs. H. I. Pelton left last week to be with her daughter, Miss Gladys who is to undergo an operation for appendicitis in Berkeley, Calif.

Members of the Pacific Wool Growers association shipped their wool into the Portland warehouse Wednesday. This wool will be graded and sold from this warehouse by managers of the association.

Our school will close the 23rd. No program will be given but a picnic is being planned and will probably be held at or near the school grounds where one is invited to bring a basket and attend.

The baseball game played Wednesday between Gold Hill Intermediates and our own resulted in a victory for our boys.

ROSE SUNDAY AT BAPTIST CHURCH

The First Baptist church with a desire to cooperate in observing Prosperity Week and especially Rose Show which will be featured is setting aside next Sunday as Rose Sunday. The morning service at 11 a. m. will be the Rose service. The church will be profusely decorated with roses, and Rev. F. R. Leach will deliver a special sermon on "Lessons of the Flowers." The choir will have some special music also. An invitation is extended to all interested to enjoy this unique and interesting special rose service. Every one attending is asked to wear a rose.

ASHLAND RAISES OVER $2000 FOR JULY 4 BLOWOUT

ASHLAND, June 9.—Two thousand dollars at least will be staked on the Fourth of July celebration here—really a two-days observance if not more so. Heretofore the merchants have stood the brunt of this expense, except in so far as the Chamber of Commerce has come to the rescue in the way of generous apportionment. This year it is proposed to pursue different tactics, in the way of allowing the public in general to bear a portion of the expense. This is only fair, in view of the fact that everybody enjoys the celebration features on a "free-for-all" basis. Consequently, subscriptions are solicited, both large, medium and small. The names of the donors will be published in local papers, but not the amount subscribed, so that individual feelings will be spared in this respect. Any sum from a nickel to $25 or over will be received in the same kind spirit which characterizes the donors thereof. Hand in your contributions early.

The estate of the late Mrs. Virginia Fales foots up approximately $35,000, and A. L. Lamb, brother of the deceased, has been named as executor. The will was published in local papers.

The cemetery at Hornbrook was the scene of the burial of the late William G. Day, who died at the family home near the Normal, in this city, early in the week. Deceased was about 72 years of age, and a native of England, London being his birthplace. He had roamed the world over, from the northern country to Australia, and previous to coming to California and Oregon, was among pioneer residents of Dakota previous to the division of that territory into North and South states. For quite a period he lived in Hornbrook, and at one time was quite an extensive property owner in that vicinity.

At the Armory, on Saturday evening June 10, Frank Hubbell will deliver an address on "Civil War Days of the American Soldiers," proceeds of the lecture going towards a fund for building a monument in honor of civil war veterans throughout the country, this tribute of respect to be erected at Seattle, Wash.

For a "riot of color," one should take a stroll through the park surroundings, noticing especially the rhododendrons and azaleas now in full bloom, which are a most pleasing sight to behold, this magnificent color scheme being reinforced by a profusion of other buds and blossoms too numerous to mention.

Jesse Winburn and Bert Moses are on their way from Colorado Springs to Ashland—in fact, they may have arrived by the time these lines are printed. They essayed a trans-continental tour by auto from the Atlan-

Crater Lake Brings Prosperity With Its Tourist Crop

Speaking of prosperity don't forget the tourist crop. Do you realize that Medford hotels are now well filled all the time and the tourist season hasn't started? This year will break all records and the advantage of the tourist crop is that it brings in money from the outside. Crater Lake is the great tourist magnet and as its fame spreads its yield in dollars and cents to the merchants of southern Oregon will steadily increase. A continuation of last year's excellent management at Crater Lake Inn insures thousands of tourists who will return to their homes and spread the delights of this marvel of marvels, the greatest scenic wonder on the Pacific coast.
