MEDFORD'S WATER SITUATION.

THE break in Medford's pipe line today again calls attention to the supreme need of a reserve reservoir in this city and the re-organization of the water system on a more desirable and permanent basis.

If a break can occur outside of the city, a break can as well occur inside the city. The latter contingency would, until a second pipe line across Bear Creek is constructed, absolutely stop the water supply to the western portion of the city, place the city without fire protection, and invite a colossal calamity.

Eventually Medford must have a new water supply and a more adequate reserve and distribution system. The time to tackle this problem is now, not later when the city may well face disaster.

Medford has had a number of warnings before. The next warning may come too late.

ETHICS IN BUSINESS.

ALBERT H. GARY, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, has always been regarded as an extremely intelligent man. But as head of the organization most powerful in American business, he has also been regarded as rather ruthless.

Either Judge Gary has become converted to a milder doctrine, or his detractors were wrong. Here are a few quotations from his address to the alumni association of Northwestern University on "The Ethics of Business."

"A large majority of business men now conduct their affairs in accordance with the avowed belief that morality is on a par with legality, and that the observance of both is essential to worthy achievements."

"Business men realize that the rights of customers must always be respected; that employees are associates rather than servants and should be treated accordingly; that stockholders of corporations as well as partners are entitled to any information immediately upon receipt of it by any officer or partner; that destructive competition must give way to humane competition, and that full and prompt publicity of all facts involving the public weal is demanded."

Within the last 20 years or more "there has been a radical change in standards and conduct of business." Theodore Roosevelt had a great deal to do with this, the speaker said.

Judge Gary also threw out the passing suggestion that henceforth "the political party which pays most attention to ethics is likely to secure indorsement by the majority of voters, including especially women."

This is all strong and constructive stuff. But what the reader is apt to wish in looking it over is that it were more than the personal convictions of the speaker. If Judge Gary, now, could only guarantee that the United States Steel Corporation and other corporations that follow its example would go in for "humane competition," and would in all ways treat its employees as associates—that a fine world this would be!

Rippling Rhymes by Walt Mason THE RUINED LIFE.

THE pencil falters in my hand as I proceed to tell of Abner Lushington LeGrand, who's in a padded cell. I knew him in his younger years, when he was blithe and gay, and joyous as a yoke of steers he caroled on his way. In paths obscure he plugged along, and gained a small reward, and life was all a grand sweet song without a minor chord. At last by chance he conquered fame, and great was his renown, and all the snap shot artists came from every part of town. They snapped him when he sat to eat his shredded bran repast, they shot his hat, they shot his feet and made him stand aghast. He couldn't cough or swear or sneeze but snapshot fans were there; they snapped the spavins on his knees, the sandbars in his hair. He couldn't dodge the fatal lens, it got his every act, and, madder than nine setting hens he felt his brain contract. The snapshot fiends so stirred his wrath he tore his beard and wept, they got him coming from the bath, they got him when he slept. And then his mind gave way, 'twas clear, his dome was on the blink; he had to shift to second gear when he would try to think. Ah, it would make one's bosom bleed to see him sunk so low; and still the snapshot fiends proceed, and picture as they go.
