

Local and Personal

A permit from a forest ranger or other federal forest official will be required by any person building a campfire within the boundaries of any national forest within the state of Oregon until the fire situation is improved according to word received at the local forest service headquarters yesterday. The order was contained in a wire from the forest service headquarters in Washington, D. C. infractions of the ruling it was said, will incur fines or imprisonment or both. Due to the large number of local people going camping at the present time and the large number camping all over the state this order has become necessary.

Anyone who has a cash register for sale please call this office 75.

Frank Roberts, of the Gates Auto company, whose residence is at the corner of South Orange and Tenth streets is lucky today. He can have all the gas in his house that he needs and still not pay for it. The meter which works on the slot machine principle and which requires the deposit of a quarter has been robbed. Someone has pried the bottom loose and has escaped with all the quarters. Frank first noticed this yesterday. All that he has to do now is to drop in the quarter. It falls through and he picks it up again, at the same time getting 25c worth of gas.

Further details of the burning of the Cinnabar Springs hotel, owned by Mrs. Cogill are told in this week's issue of the Yreka (Cal.) Journal. The fire started on the roof of the hotel, near the stovepipe at 11 o'clock and the shake roof burned like tinder, the hotel structure and cottages for guests being in ruins in half an hour. There was no insurance. Mrs. R. A. Lewis, a daughter of Mrs. Cogill was burned about the arms and had her hair singed while packing water on the burning roof. All that was saved from the flames was Mrs. Cogill's collection of old silver and curios. The hotel had been in operation for 20 years, and was known to scores of local people.

A number of local people who are camped at the springs left their own camp and aided in fighting the fire.
