

WALLERS-FRICK PUT ON SPLENDID BOUT AT SMOKER

If Ben Dixon has any more unknown amateur boxers under cover like Joe Wallers, who participated in one of the best four round bouts ever seen in the city, with Battling Frick as his opponent, at the weekly exhibition of the Medford Athletic club last night, the fight fans of Medford would like to see him trot them out. Wallers is a distinct find and made a hit in this his first public appearance in any boxing arena.

Without any training he substituted for Joe Blackburn who, as announced by Manager Brown from the stage last night, refused to go on "unless he got all the house receipts and the building, too." Joe was never missed by the fans who went crazy with delight at the splendid bout, full of force, skill and action, put up by Wallers and Frick, at 148 pounds. It went to a draw and every second during the four rounds a knockout seemed imminent. The men formed one of the best matched pairs ever seen in a local ring each being willing to give and take and imbued with a desire to make a clean-up quickly. Frick who had been under the weather for a week or more went into the fray eagerly however, because it was reported to him that Joe Blackburn had said several days ago he was yellow. Frick can always be depended on to give his best, and in his various bouts in Medford has shown indomitable courage and pluck. A future match between Waller and Frick will undoubtedly be a good drawing card.

The exhibition put up last night by Bob Brown, manager of the club was one of the best all around ones yet seen, with wide variety and interest. The bout between Joe Harrell and Jerry Lortin, at 110 pounds, was another exciting well matched exhibition which was suddenly ended in the second round when a straight right to the chin knocked Lortin out.

The other bouts, all interesting, were as follows:

Ben Harrell, 85 pounds, against his older brother, Ned, 90 pounds, a draw; Lloyd Farmer vs. Lindsey Griggsby, at 95 pounds, a draw; Jake Stillwell vs. Rube Jones, at 95 pounds, a draw; Punkin Draws vs. his older and heavier brother, Raymond Draws, by all odds the most laughable draw bout of four rounds ever seen in Medford, with Punkin weighing only about 50 pounds but every inch a fighter, and Raymond's weight about 65 pounds; and the four round draw between the Otis brothers.

Independent Fruit Company Warehouse Completed

Another step in the development of the fruit business in the Rogue River valley is marked by the completion of the new $15,000 warehouse of the Independent Fruit company, commercial packers, at the end of South Central street on the Southern Pacific tracks. This new building is one of the finest of its kind in southern Oregon, having 10,000 square feet of floor space and strictly modern equipment.

Raymond R. Reter, former warehouse manager of the Bardwell Fruit company, will manage the new Independent Fruit company. Reter has had eight years experience in the fruit business in this section and is thoroughly acquainted with every phase of the work. He has announced that the new company will limit its activity to fruit packing, regardless of where the grower markets his fruit. This policy of specializing in packing will be attractive to growers who prefer to handle the marketing of their crops.

Packing will be done under the supervision of Dee Hendrickson and car loading in charge of G. H. Maasden. Both men are well known in fruit circles here, having worked in the same capacities for several years at the Bardwell Fruit company.

Already several of the large orchards have closed packing contracts with the Independent Fruit company, including the estate of Patter Palmer, the Modoc and Klamath orchards.

Shoes with wooden soles and rubber heels are being manufactured in Maine for the use of persons working about electrical apparatus to protect them from shocks.

NEW WAREHOUSE SGOBLE AND DAY IS IN OPERATION

The finishing touches on the fine new warehouse of Sgoble & Day, the New York fruit distributors, of which Crawford C. Lemmon is the local representative and manager, are being done, and the latter has moved his office from the Hotel Holland building to the new structure. In fact the plant is already in operation, as a force of men are at work making many hundreds of fruit boxes for shipment later.

The warehouse, with its rear abutting the Southern Pacific tracks, is located on South Fir street, just south of the J. T. Gagnon Lumber company building and across from the Southern Pacific freight depot, and is a frame structure, 60 by 101 feet, and 22 feet height, of the modern type of fruit warehouse construction, furnished with modern equipment, including a Cutler grading machine.

All the light and air comes from above from rows of windows located in the roof controlled from the floor, thus insuring perfect ventilation and daylight illumination. The building stands well back from South Fir street, from which a well graveled drive will be a welcome feature incidental to the delivery of fruit.

Although the well known firm of Sgoble & Day has operated in this locality for thirty years past, this is the first time during that period that it has operated its own warehouse. Experienced crews have been engaged to take care of the firm's packing and shipping, and Manager Lemmon states that every effort will be made to put out a good pack.

Harry Stoltz, the foreman for the new plant, formerly held the same position with the local Oregon Growers Packing association, and prior to that with the Earl Fruit company.
