

ARISTOCRATIC RUSS ROBIN HOOD DIES WITH HIS BOOTS ON

TAMBOFF, Russia, Aug.—Alexander Antonoff, whom his followers considered in the light of a reincarnated Robin Hood, but whom the soviet government classed as a Jesse James, fought to the last when surrounded and killed by the state police at his hiding place in a tiny village near Tamboff late in June.

Antonoff once was in the old Russian army. When the Bolsheviki took power he opposed them and, gathering about him thousands of followers—fast horsemen from the Steppes—he harassed the Red army in the south of Russia for several years.

Last September Antonoff's last stand was broken up by the Reds. For months the state police sought out his hiding place. Finally some of his confederates were promised amnesty and betrayed him.

Early one June evening eight men, led by Policeman Pokulikin came to the hut of a peasant woman, Marie Katsanova, whose name will go down in the fantastic legends surrounding the life of Antonoff. In this hut in the thick woods near the river Vorona, Antonoff was hiding. The police called to her and she came out of the house denying Antonoff was there. No sooner had the woman turned away than two men started firing upon the police from the windows of the hut. Peasants, attracted by the shooting, ran to the village church and rang the bells and hundreds of peasants armed themselves with sticks and stones and formed a cordon about the hut.

For several hours the battle continued until, with night at hand, the police ran very short of ammunition. Two of them crept up to the house and set the roof on fire. As smoke began to pour out of the windows, two men broke from the house and started running toward the woods. With each step they turned to fire their revolvers at the police. They had almost reached the woods when they were shot down. Their bodies were immediately identified, one being the famous chief, and the other his brother, Dimitri Antonoff.

To convince the population that the bandits never had been workingmen, the soviet authorities had autopsies performed and doctors issued statements saying that neither of the brothers ever occupied himself with hard work, "for their hands were soft like those of noblemen and there was fat all over their bodies, showing that they had fed themselves very well at the time when the famine in the villages carried away many souls."

Pasteurization is a process of so heating milk as to kill and make inactive a majority of the germs present, without having any detrimental effect upon the food value or physical properties of the milk. It has undoubtedly gone far toward solving the city milk problem.

The pasteurization of milk as at present carried out at the modern dairy is a process in which extreme dependence may be placed. It has been demonstrated conclusively that this method of safeguarding milk not only precludes the existence of any possible harmful bacteria in milk, but that it does this without affecting the high food value for which good milk is so famous.

When the heating process has been completed the milk is quickly cooled by passing over coils containing cold brine solution. The milk then goes to the bottling machine. The bottled milk after storage for several hours in the refrigerator, is ready to be placed upon the delivery wagon in well lined cases and delivered at your door.

A few of the advantages which may be claimed for pasteurization are: Pasteurization furnishes the city dwellers with a clean and wholesome food at a price which is within the reach of all. Milk which is pasteurized is free from disease germs and may be safely fed to the infant or invalid as well as to the athlete.

The arguments against pasteurization have been that the pasteurized milk had a cooked taste; that the process destroyed the cream line and that certain essential accessory food products were destroyed by the heat. Investigations have shown that what ever reason there may have been for these arguments at one time, they have been completely removed by scientific methods, and the housewife who selects her milk distributor for his clean, sanitary plant and his up-to-date pasteurizing and handling equipment, may rest assured that she is giving her family the most healthful food obtainable.

FLAPPERISM IS PET AVERSION OF COUNTESS DE GOLIERS, 96 YEARS OLD

Countess De Goliers

Famous Woman Doctor Tells How She Has Been Able to Retain Health.

By H. T. Hopkins, International News Service Staff Correspondent. PORTLAND, Aug. 19.—Dr. Charlotte de Goliers Davenport—the Countess de Goliers—has a pet aversion: The flapper.

"I don't like these modern women, heatedly declared the countess, who is ninety-six years old. "With their rolled stockings, bobbed hair and clubs they are not very admirable. I talked to a club of them here in Portland and I told them they had better be home cooking and mending for their husbands, and I told them that nobody wants to read the papers they write for their clubs."

Dr. Davenport, who is touring the western part of the United States for her health, formerly was tutor to the Empress of Austria. Of her seventeen children some of her sons have been generals in the French army. One of them is said to be the richest man in Brazil.

She Looks Young Dr. Davenport appears to be a woman of sixty instead of ninety-six. She has a waist measurement of twenty-five inches. She has never known the feel of a corset.

Her advice to young men is: "Don't get married until you can find a woman who is willing to do her share."

And pass up the flapper type! She had some advice for the reporter: "Eat the right kind of food."

And not to overlook the photographer: "Drink lots of water." Good food, lots of water and hard exercise are her receipts for long and happy life.

"I love young men," said the doctor, and to prove it she called: "Willie! Willie!" The clicking of a typewriter in an adjoining room stopped and a comparatively young man of fifty-one years appeared.

Introduces Husband "This is my husband," said the countess when she introduced the handsome, black haired man. He seemed mighty happy to be her third spouse. The first was Count Paskoff, of Russia, whom she married when she was fifteen. He died a year later. She was wedded three years later to a French colonel. He died when she was thirty-five. Meanwhile she had become an expert fencer, and she went to the Empress of Austria as the later's fencing tutor.

Dr. Davenport came to America forty-four years ago and became very popular in Washington and throughout the east, due to her beauty and accomplishments. Her home now is in Philadelphia.

The countess is very much opposed to being photographed.

MAN WALKS AGAIN AFTER BEING CRIPPLED NEARLY FORTY YEARS

(By International News Service.) NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Through a triumph of surgery, Frederick W. Birge, fifty-three, farmer, of Middlebury, Vt., is expected by physicians of the Hospital for Ruptured and Crippled to walk again for the first time in thirty-nine years.

The date will be the anniversary of his loss of the use of both legs through infantile paralysis.

This is the earliest case of infantile paralysis on record in Vermont and is said to be the longest period of paralysis, terminating in recovery, in the annals of surgery.

Birge was fourteen when stricken. His legs contracted into the position of one sitting. Efforts to cure him were without result, and the case was given up as hopeless. His life itself was limited to the range of a wheel chair.

Powerful Arms He did not collapse into helplessness however. Though his lower limbs were useless, his arms, by constant propelling of his chair and pulling himself up by anything he could grasp, developed almost the strength of a gorilla.

With his sister, he owns a sixty-acre farm in Vermont, producing poultry, dairy products, fruits and berries. Birge learned to pull himself up, hand over hand, into the seat of a wagon and thus managed his farm and sold his produce. It supports them both.

Eight years ago there was an infantile paralysis epidemic in Vermont, and when it subsided the state board of health established an after-care department, in charge of Miss Bertha E. Weisbrod, of Boston. One of the nurses visiting a boy who lived near the Birge heard of the neighboring farmer. She went to see him. Sure to Walk A year ago he was examined by Dr. Robert Lovett, of Boston. It was decided there was a possibility of his being cured if he could have the services of specialists. On December 19 last Birge was removed to the Hospital for Ruptured and Crippled. Dr. Armitage Whitman, visiting surgeon, operated on both ankles and hips, straightening and stretching the legs. August 15 the plaster cast which extends from his feet to his shoulders blades, was removed and temporary braces adjusted, and he will walk, the doctors say.

LIVERPOOL PRICES IN WHEAT MARKET SHOW WEAKNESS

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Extreme weakness at Liverpool was reflected in the wheat market here today and caused a decline in values during the early dealings. All deliveries went to a new low level for the season, the December touching a dollar. Support came mainly from shorts, while some stop loss orders were caught on the way down. Receipts of wheat today were estimated at 456,000 bushels. Sales of 400,000 bushels of wheat were made to the seaboard late Saturday and early today with more business in sight.

The opening which started from 5% to 1% cents decline with September 28c and December 31c to 31.25c, was followed by a slight general advance all around.

Corn was weak in sympathy with wheat and on better weather conditions over part of the belt. The opening, which was 5% to 1c lower, with September 58 1/2c to 58 1/2c, was followed by a moderate general rise on all deliveries.

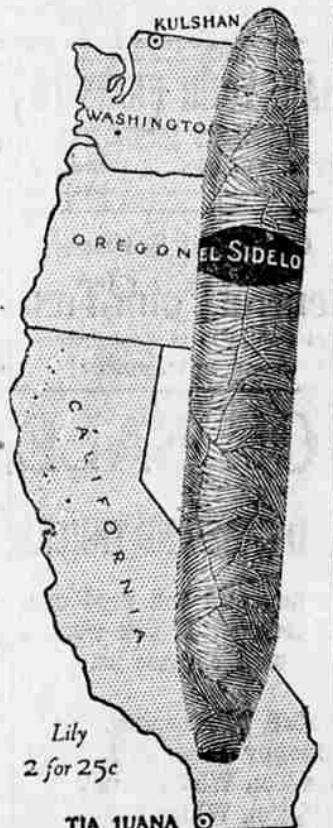

Oats started unchanged to 1/4 off with September 30 1/2c and held near the initial range.

Weakness in grains was reflected in provisions.

BIG POWER for BIG TRUCKS

If you want to keep your truck trouble-proof, feed it "Red Crown" and nothing else. The quality of "Red Crown" is always the same, whenever and wherever you buy it. It vaporizes rapidly and uniformly in the carburetor. And it is consumed completely in the combustion chambers, converting all its heat units into power at the driving wheels. That means a better average mileage, and a sweeter-running engine. Fill at the Red Crown sign — at Service Stations, garages, and other dealers. STANDARD OIL COMPANY (California)
