Ye Smudge Pot

By Arthur Perry.

There is some criticism in religious journals, that the "kept press" is fighting the entrance of the church into politics for "ulterior motives," because "corrupt interests" resent the "coming of righteousness to the ballot booths."

No one objects to the church as a moral factor in politics, except when it is transformed into a piece of putty in the hands of peanut politicians, who are glorified with short order sanctimoniousness, for votes only.

The sinners have the idea that one ward heeler, well armed with the cussedness of politics is too many for a pastor and a congregation who believe the campaign is conducted on the lines of the Golden Rule, and everything they hear.

If the church can save politics, O.K., but if politics is going to save the church, K. O. The kitten can never drink from the same milk pan with the hyena.

A BLASPHEMOUS PHARISEE

(Corvallis Gazette-Times) A comment heard last night following a church service leads to the belief that apparently too many people go to church to review not their own shortcomings, but those of the choir and the clergyman. They seem to expect that the minister shall be something more or less superhuman spiritually, intellectually, oratorically and magnetically, and from the singers they expect effects comparable to grand opera stars of the 'steenth magnitude and salaries equal to film favorites.

RIGHTS OF THE MINORITY.

SOME of the diners at the Forum Wednesday who applauded the remarks of Major William T. Morgan most vociferously are going to vote for the compulsory school bill.

Nevertheless a portion of the Major's excellent address, supplies one of the strongest arguments against the passage of such a bill.

For Major Morgan emphasized the rights of the minority, the obligation of all good citizens to protect the rights of the minority.

"This government," he said "will make a serious mistake and jeopardize its future if it ever comes to the place where minorities are not free in the enjoyment of their privileges."

Since the foundation of this Republic, American citizens have enjoyed the privilege of directing the education of their children as they saw fit, the theory being that the parents and not the state, are the supreme judges of what is best for the child's welfare.

If the compulsory school bill passes Oregon will be the first and only state in the Union to deny this privilege. It is true only a minority will be effected, but as Major Morgan said the rights of the minority are sacred.

This country was founded by men of all religions and all beliefs. It was founded on the corner stone of personal freedom, on the right of each citizen to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience, to regulate the affairs of his own life, as he saw fit, as long as his views and actions were not inimical to the welfare of the people as a whole.

This principle was made the very spiritual foundation of the Federal Constitution. In simple terms, the idea was this: Even if there should come a time when there were only two Baptists or two Episcopalians or two Catholics or two Presbyterians in the entire United States, those two should have the same right to worship their faith in their own way, as the millions who followed more popular dogmas.

If the Compulsory School Bill passes this portion of the constitution will be nothing but a scrap of paper. Those who want to send their children to Catholic schools or Episcopal schools or Seven Day Adventists schools, or Lutheran schools or Christian Science schools or military schools or private schools will not, if they live in Oregon, be allowed to do so.

The measure is obviously unconstitutional and if passed will undoubtedly be knocked out by the courts. But that will involve time and money. Good citizenship at the polls as defined by Major Morgan should be sufficient to make legal action unnecessary.

Rippling Rhymes

Walt Mason REALISM.

O H, THE realistic writer, with his novel, makes me sad; for his hero is a blighter and his heroine's as bad. Says the "realistic" fellow, when he takes his fountain pen, "All the world is punk and yellow, freaks its women and its men: I'll describe a little section of the life that I behold, write up squalor and dejection, mildew, rottenness and mold. And my book will have no humor, nothing gay will it disclose: for I'd write about a tumor rather than describe a rose. There will be no plot or action such as healthy people choose, for I cater to that fraction of the crowd that has the blues." So he writes a sordid story of a sordid lot of wrecks, failures young and failures hoary, talking evermore of Sex. And some critics cry, "Great Caesar! How he reads the human soul! He's a grand and gifted geezer who could write that rigmarole!" And the smell of rot grows denser as the realism grows, while men talk about a censor, and the wise man holds his nose. Realism in the sewer rakes and digs and claws around, hunting carrion that's newer than poor Zola ever found.
