BEARS RAID CAMP STORE HOUSE AT CRATER LAKE PARK

The headquarters of Crater Lake National park were removed from government camp in the park to the win ter office in the federal building here last Saturday, with the arrival of Harry H. Long, secretary of Superintendent Alex Sparrow, who with Mrs. Sparrow is still at the lake and will be there possibly for eight or ten days yet, depending on the weather, looking after improvement work still being done there by a small force.

Mr. and Mrs. Sparrow are residing in the small cabin adjacent to the headquarters building at government camp, and the bears of the national park who are very temperamental, as they always grow ravenous and trou-blesome after the lodge has closed and there is no lodge refuse pile to feed on. have to rustle through the forest for their food, and hence they always raid the food cache of the government camp kitchen, using almost human intelligence in so doing.

Last Saturday night they broke into the kitchen store house of that camp. took away 100 pounds of fresh meat and some other goodles. Sunday night they broke into the kitchen and, ac cording to a phone message received in the city next day, held a reunion there and had jots or fun.

Then too, the story reached here that one big bear chased another one to the roof of the Sparrow cabin and carried on a fierce argu-ment on that high perch. The superintendent went out and ordered them off, reinforcing his arguments with the elaborate and usually effective vocabulary he had acquired in his many years service in the United States army, including the Spanish mongrelanguage with which he had become cuba. This alone would bring any ordinary bear down.

But the two extraordinary Crate: Lake bruins merely looked down with contempt on the retired and much overheated ex-army sergeant, and went on with their scrapping, even when he came out with an old broom and waved it up at them, and addressed them as a noisy set of "nosey, noisey, hardboiled contemptible curs." At least it sounded something like that down at Fert Klamath, in the very still, cold night air at that high altitude.

Anyhow, next morning Superinten dent Sparrow called up Harry Homer Long, his faithful Friday, on the telephone at the office here, and explained the conduct of the Crater Lake bears until the wires melted and spolled the connection, but not until after he had first ordered Long to send up to the lake forthwith a powerful and good shofgun and lots of shells.

It is against the federal law, you know, to kill a bear or any other wild animal in a national park, but it is permissable to fill bears with small shot and powder for educative, food protecting and sleep inducing pur-
