SCHOOL MEETING IS CLOSED WITH A FINE PROGRAM

The Jackson County Teachers Institute which has been in session since for the general election, which were Monday. The concensus of opinion among one of the most successful and valutute was opened this morning by a song by the second grade of the Jack-son school. Miss Palates son school. Miss Faidine, county health nurse, explained her work throughout the county and commented on the health conditions in the outlying districts.

Mr. Thompson of the Medford schools, traced the development of the Smith-Hughes work which provides for the training of boys and girls over fourteen who do not expect to have schooling above the high school. Onehalf of the instructor's salary is car-ried by the government and the re-mainder by the district which works under the Smith-Hughes bill. Oregon is one of the foremost states in taking up this work in its secondary schools. The major portion of the morning was devoted to department sessions. Miss Blumenfeld and Miss Wattenbarger of the Ashland schools, discussed with the primary sections playground work and story telling. Harold Saxe Tuttle of Pacific university delivered an address before the high school and rural teachers on "Discipline as Moral Training." Professor Roy R. Hewitt at a later session spoke to the high school teachers on "Our Legal Duty." "he last session began at one p. m. with a meeting of the school officers, who discussed school needs in the county and state. Frank H. Shepherd of the department of industrial educaof the department of industrial educa-tion at O. A. First it represents a substantial saving to the community, for it deals in what would otherwise be waste material.

Second, it tends to lessen pauper ism by putting within the reach o those with smaller incomes article which they do not feel they can af ord at regular prices, and they might, in many cases, be forced to ask for.

Third, it makes a source of income for the home service fund of the Red Cross. A well supplied, well patron-leed thrift shop will go a long way toward making the organization self-supporting.
