

Local and Personal

The annual homecoming of Olive Rebeck lodge last night was one of the most enjoyable events in its history, and was enjoyed by 200 Odd Fellows and their ladies. The hall was beautifully decorated with evergreens and other Christmas effects. The serving of supper began at 6:30 p. m. and continued until all were served. This was followed by a lodge session during which every member responded either in person or by letter. There was also a mixed program of songs, recitations and sketches.

A student body meeting in which much spirited oratory was the main feature was held at the high school this morning. Considering the violence of the discussion, which was on an amendment to the high school constitution, which would require the high school to give an emblem to members of the stock judging team each year, the president, Dub Johnston, kept good order. Several students rose to speak at once at different times. If the amendment passes other measures may be introduced to award an emblem to the glee clubs, physical training classes, dramatic club, volleyball teams, tennis teams, and the marble and tiddley-winks squads. It is likely also that some one will soon introduce an amendment to deprive the debate teams of emblems awarded them as the promiscuous distribution of hardware is liable to break the high school up in business.
