

Local and Personal

Because of the very mild weather accompanied by quite a chinook wind from the southeast this morning and forenoon and the general feel of a storm is on the way here. This was confirmed at the local weather bureau office which reported that the thermometer rose 20 degrees from this morning's minimum about 4 o'clock to 54 degrees about 6 o'clock, a weather transformation seldom seen here in two hours time. This afternoon the barometer was falling rapidly and the coming storm was expected to arrive late this afternoon or some time this evening. Rain is the prediction.
