DEWEY JONES IS FOUND GUILTY H'WAY ROBBERY

The jury in circuit court at Grants Pass late yesterday forenoon, two hours after it had received its instructions from Judge Thomas, found Dewey Jones guilty of highway robbery as charged. His brother, Oregon Jones, who recently made a confession, changed his plea of not guilty on the same charge to guilty in circuit court last Wednesday morning. Much local interest is felt in these cases because of the string of auto hold-ups committed throughout this section including the hold-up of eight Medford men and women last October when they were returning from a dance at the fair grounds pavilion.

According to statements made by Judge Thomas at Grants Pass the brothers will probably be sentenced tomorrow. The penalty that can be imposed for highway robbery is from 10 years to life imprisonment in the state penitentiary. Ellsworth Kelly, who recently broke jail with Oregon Jones and was recaptured in Montana, was sentenced by Judge Thomas early this week to 20 years.

Oregon Jones who changed his plea to guilty in order that he might testify in the case against Dewey Jones declared in court that his brother had no part in the robberies in which he himself was principal, but refused to name his confederate in those robberies.

"The case against the Jones brothers has aroused more interest than any trial in Josephine county for years," says the Grants Pass Courier. "The court room has been crowded daily with people who got there as soon as the doors were opened in the morning. Many took their lunch with them and remained during the noon hour so that they would not lose their seats. The case was hard fought from the start.

"The confession by Oregon Jones created quite a sensation in itself. People are inclined to believe that he was trying to emulate the James boys in their daring crimes. It is believed that with these men convicted that there will be a great lessening of crime in the city during the summer, as Oregon Jones laid claim to nearly every robbery committed."
