

Local and Personal

Due to the extra amount of humidity following the recent rain and a drop in temperature, this morning with its minimum of 23 degrees was generally thought to be the coldest here for weeks past—it felt that way. It continued quite chilly all day and the prediction is for fair and continued cold. The warmest temperature of yesterday was 47.5 degrees.

Max Brumberg, a salesman, whose home is in Portland, has a hard luck tale to tell of southern Oregon. The other day he ran out of gasoline and left his car standing with two wheels on the pavement while he walked on a mile to a gallon of fuel. When he came back a traffic cop was waiting for him, and a little later a heartless judge at Ashland mulcted him of $25 for parking on the pavement. Mr. Brumberg, who was in Eugene yesterday, is still boiling over and putting out the fire whenever he thinks of it.—Eugene Register.
