So far the predicted rain storm here for the past two days has proved a fizzle, and only four hundredths of an inch of rain fell last night which, while welcome, seems only tantalizing when so much more wetness is needed in this section. However, conditions are still threatening and a downpour may come within a day or so. The general hope now is that the predicted rain will come before Easter day and after that day. Cooler weather is also predicted for tonight.
